The show has been billed, and rightly so, as Tidewater's most exciting automobile show. Besides new cars there will be refreshments and prizes galore during the four-day feetival.

Sponsored last year for the first time by the Virginia Beach automobile dealers the show was a howling success. The sponsors have added many features for the 1963 show.

Represented in the show will be Chrysler, Buick, Dodge, Plymouth, Valiant, Pontiac, Tempest, Ford, Falcon, Mercury, Comet, Nash, Rambler, Studebaker, Lark and several cars of the future.

in library science. She traced the growth of the library from I a small unheated room manned by a handful of devoted women to the present modern building on 22nd Street with its up-to-date books, magazines, its well-trained staff of pald workers and volunteers and its many plans for future development.

Charles Daws spoke on behalf of the seven-year-old Virginia Beach Civic Chorus and announced that a religious program will be held at Galfiles Episcopal Church during December to which the public is luylfed. He also said that volunteer singers are invited to join the chorus. The musical group has not been too widely advertised but is an excellent cultural nucleus at the beach.

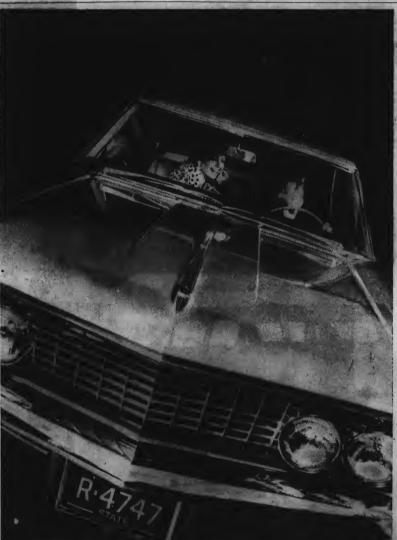

Mrs. Ann Penington was scheduled to speak on the Virginia Beach Little Theatre and the Virginia Beach Little Theatre and the weeting.

Mrs. Ray Shield Jr., president of the AAUW, urged members to attend an all-day workshop to be held in Norfolk, Nov. 20.

solit levers with a separate stick for overdrive are mounted.

The gear-shift lever is topped with a spring - loaded button which permits instant kick-down from overdrive to direct gear. Lever travel is held to a minimum for quicker, more positive shifting. A small light signals when the overdrive lever is moved to the "in" position.

The E-Stick automatic clutch transmission, introduced last year on the Rambler American, is an added option for the 1963 Classic cast - iron engine. It combines the economy of a standard transmission with much of the convenience of an automatic transmission, rhere is no clutch pedal to operate when shifting gears.

Flash - O - Matic automatic transmission, optional on all models, is controlled by a new lever mounted on the steering column in place of the pushbutton system formerly used.

for national honors.

The Virginia 4-H Livestock judging team was selected from the district 4-H winners that competed in state competition at State 4-H Short Course, held at Blacksburg this past June. Each member of the team is trained by his respective County. Agent or assistant, and the entire team receives extensive training from the 4-H Club livestock specialist from VPI. These boys should be given a lot of credit for the hard, and outstanding work that they are doing. In order to be qualified to compete in such stiff competition, it is necessary for these boys to spend most of their afternoons after school, as well as just about every week-end, traveling all over the state, receiving training and practice in 4-H livestock judging. The state 4-H livestock specialist, who is now Barnes Allen, former Asst. County Agent, here in Princess Anne, also does a great deal to help these boys do the caliber work that they are doing.

Most of us are broadminded; in an argument we see both points of view, the one that is wrong and our own.

STATE 4-H LIVESTOCK JUDGING TEAM RECEIVES HONORS
The Virginia 4-H Livestock Judging Team won the Atlantic Rural Exposition Junior Livestock Judging Contest, which was held at the State Fair of Virginia in Richmond. however, Lois tells us that their particular County delegation, consisted of about 75 4-H Club members. This is quite a contrast to the 10 to 12 Princess Anne Members that attended the 4-H Short Course at Blacksburg this past June as one of the largest delegations there.

Lois also goes on to tell us about a county fair that Kent County holds each year, in which all 4-H members have an opportunity to show their achievements and project work for the year's program. She tells about some of the other kinds of 4-H Clubs that they have.

Usually, each community club will select one or more club projects to be carried out in a group effort by the entire club in order that major achievement and recognition may be acquired for their respective clubs.

The projects to be offered are selected by the 4-H Projects Committee, consisting of Adult volunteer leaders in Princess Anne County. These leaders have a thorough knowledge of the 4-H Club work, and of the projects that will be most desirable and will best fit the needs of the clubs in the county. Most of the community clubs in P.A. are now meeting regular-

Most of the community clubs very closely with the Club leaders, and I hope we will have an opportunity to attend one of the club meetings in the very near future.

Yet, there are several new food drying processes on the

some of them are and how they may affect us.

some of them are and how they may affect us.

Two of these drying methods combine with another keeping method, freezing. One is dehy-drofreezing. In dehydrofreezing, fruits and vegetables are dried to about half their original weight. Then they are frozen & marketed in frozen form. Quality-wise, they're equal to conventional frozen foods.

THAT'S A WONDERFUL

Yes, that's a wonderful story. Maybe he'll be president some day, or like the man in the story-book. Maybe his picture will one day be shown in an historic sketch—a flashback of the life of

HE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH.

"The Clown's the greatest factor as each for the building of charsactor and good distinguish, it is a formhouse of spiritual reduces. Withtent a sirred Garcha, noither of a mocracy user civilization can servive. Them are four secund reasons why very person about distend services regularly and support the Church. They sen: (1) For his over salte. (2) For his children; sake. (3) For the take of his comnumity and station. (4) For the man: (3) For the take of his con munity and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, whice needs his moral and material sup-port. Plan to go to church regu-larly and read your Bible daily.

It could be you. It could be your own child, or someone you know. The young have dreams, the old have visions. But, from young dreams come realities.

The greatest reality is God. He is waiting . . . for you. He waits in your church. Relive the dreams of long ago this Sunday . . , in church we call those dreams, prayers! For prayer is often but a wish, and frequently a silent "thank you" sighed to God. You can face stern realities with stronger faith, if you have that faith renewed—often.

SWEET POTATO DEMONSTRA. THORNOY TO CHANGE PICTURE

The Sweet Potato Producers of Princess Anne County had an apportunity about two weeks ago to view and study a remarkable sweet potato variety trial, conducted by Melvin Williams, at Pleasant Ridge. This demonstration consisted of sizeable acreage of four new varieties in comparison with the standard Porto Rico 109 variety.

The variety with the highest yield was V2158, with a yield per acre of No. 1 potatoes of 430 bushels. According to my eye judgement, this variety would be about 3rd in quality.

The second highest yield in variety was Centennial, a variety developed by Louisiana state. This variety yielded 418 No. 1's per acre. The quality of this potato was probably second of the five.

Third highest yield was Gold Rush, with 370 bushels of No. 1's per acre. The quality of this potato was probably second of the five.

VIRGINIA BEACH — "After all, pedestrians are people. So give them a break in traffic."

In those words Chief of Police Reeves E. Johnson today appealed to motorists to do their share in making the current Pedestrian Safety program of the Virginia Beach Police and the Governor's Highway Safety Committge a complete success.

"An y effective Pedestrian and in shopping areas," the Safety program must have the whole-hearted co-operation of both motorists and pedestrian, Johnson said.

He reminded motorists that even when the heedless conduct of walkers puts a driver in a spot, the driver is not justified in retaliating.

Victory For Local

VIRGINIA BEACH—Coach Carlton Bowyer and his undefeated, untied Seahawks football team reach the climax of their 1962 season this Friday when they tangle with the rugged Southampton eleven at Courtland. The contest will decide the District One Group Two title. The Hawks, probably playing their poorest game, had a close call last week against Holland, but managed to win by a 13 to 12 score to run their season's record to 7-0. Virginia Beach is the only undefeated, untied scholastic team in the area.

Coach Bowyer, along with his small band of players, was greatly displeased with the Hawks play against Holland. "If they think they can beat Southampton playing like that they have a surprise coming," Bowyer retorted.

Both teams boast perfect conference records. Southampton and they will have lots of local felferne records. Southampton doubt be up for the contest and they will have lots of local felferne records. DITORIALLY SPEAKING

VETERANS DAY - 1962 "PEACE WITH HONOR"

Sunday, November 11, will be observed throughout the United States as Veterans Day, a day in which the Nation pays just tribute to its more than 22,000,000 living veterans of all wars. The theme for this year's observance is "Peace With Honor."

The President of the United States has issued a proclamation calling attention to the Veterans Day observance and in Vir-ginia Beach the chairman of the Veterans Day Committee, Mr. Joseph T. Crosswhite, Jr., has urged all citizens to make this day an observance that will strengthen the en-tire Nation

President Kennedy has said: "We are deeply conscious of the debt we owe to the men and women of our Nation who served in our armed forces during times of conflict, thereby preserving our heritage of freedom and advancing the cause of of freedom and advancing the cause of world peace.

In honor of our Nation's veterans all federal buildings, schools, hospitals, city buildings and other appropriate locations should display the American flag Sunday, November 11, and again on Monday, November 12.

Veterans Day this year with its "Peace With Honor" theme is a challenge at a time when the world is watching to see if we can demonstrate the self-discipline which is required to accomplish this end.

It is up to all of us to maintain this moment of inspiration and dedication throughout the year.

A Pops Concert Scores Here

To say that members of the Junior League were well pleased with the reception and size of the audience at their pops concert last Sunday in the Alan B. Shepard Convention Center would be putting it mildly. They were overjoyed with the result.

The concert was sponsored by the Junior League and some 35 of its members residing here spearheaded the project. It was an experiment by the Junior League and its Virginia Beach members but the success of the venture more than proved the point and we can look forward to more such undertakings.

The convention hall had been arranged to accomodate some 1800 persons seated. All seats were filled for the concert and there were many standing in the back of the huge hall. Junior Leaguers were delighted and rightly so.

This response on the part of Virginia Beach people to a program of this type speaks well for the cultural aspect of this community. The entire area is grateful to the Junior League for making this experiment. We believe the community has demonstrated its interest in the programs of this type and we hope that it is the beginning of more to come.

We congratulate members of the Junior League for bringing this type of entertainment to our community.

I am not normally given to watching the idiot box in the flexmoon on weekdays, having several dozen ings to do. I exclude, however, things like the ford Series, contests involving pretty girls in mall bathing suits, Bullwinkle, and certain ther uplifting programs. The other afternoon, flipped the switch and tuned in the three hannels available to us. I hope my Mother was roud of her work on my manners, 'cause I was of sick on the rug while watching parts of two may operas. These two were dreary parades of a most desperate, sick, accident-prone, ineffect, cowardly slobs since the Spanish Inquisical. Instant misery. The psychologists, bless m, say people watch these programs so they can observe people ho lead lives worse their own.

If this country is filled with families only a little bit better If this country is filled with families only a little bit better than the fugitives from the men with the nets who appear the soap operas, then we haven't a prayer. I think the only d reason for watching this drivel is to be in traction, in a teral hospital, with multiple fractures of all limbs, a cracked wis, and with the only nurse six counties away on a coffee

TRUST NO ONE

The third channel had to do with a little number called he Do You Trust." How about that grammar? The answer to question, of course, is "Not a living soul connected with aftern TV!!" I watched this program long enough to hear an MC a series of leading questions of a pair of poor souls names and Helen. Bill sounded off about how men must be the bute masters of the home. Helen didn't have a single word to She was just standing there waiting for the commercial so could hook him in the mouth. If not that, then she was ming the "chair treatment" for brother Bill. Have you heard he chair therapy? The wife allows the husband to go sound ap and then whales the stuffing out of him with a kitchen s. Very effective for curing husbands of things like whiskey somen.

evspapers and magazines are full of articles about the conviolence on television. Various organizations raise about the fact that some programs are too suggestive ill thus have a terrible effect on the young. Every time I need these blasts, I'm reminded of Mark Twain's comment questioned about a nevel thought to be a bad influence on ung ladies of the day. Mr. Twain said that he'd never met a need been ruined by a book.

VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1962

LITTLE THEATRE OPE '62-63 SEASON TONIGH VIRGINIA BEACH — A spell is cast, the audience grows quiet and with a puff of smoke the curtain rises on the Virginia Beach Little Theatre production of "Bell, Book and Candle," directed by Ann Penington. The play will open the new theatre season tonight and Friday at the Virginia Beach High School auditorium at 8:30 p.m. As these photographs show, the Litt's Theatre has always strived for variation in its plays; they have ranged from cowboy to drama to mystery. Many of its original members are still active but new actors and backstage workers are constantly encouraged to join the group. New ideas are also encouraged, as evidenced by "Theatre Night," instigated this season by the Bay Harbour Club. Members and their guests may call the club for reservations Friday night for cocktails, dinner, the theatre and late evening nightcaps. But take care what you drink—for Hernice Rumble, as Aunt Queenie (center photo), has just conjured up a smoking concoction in a jigge! Tickets to the lively, modern comedy about witches will be on sale at the door. (All photos by Boice Studio)

If a man runs after money, he's a materialist. If he keeps it, he's a capitalist. If he spends it, he's a playboy. If he doesn't get it, he lacks ambition. If he gets it without working, he's a parasite. If he gets it after a life of hard labor, he's a fool who get nothing out of life.

63 Chevrolet Trucks

THEY'VE ALWAYS BEEN TOUGH BUT NEVER STRONGER THAN NOW!

You can be sure that new engines, frames, suspensions that licked Mexico's Baja* Run will work for you long, faithfully and at traditionally low Chevrolet cost.

A Chevrolet truck has always been a sound investment because of its quality construction. This is what makes it give you an honest day's work every day at very low cost and—when you are finished with it—return more resale money to your happy pocket.

This year stronger frames, engines that can pull more, and practically tailor-made suspension systems make Chevrolet trucks a better buy than ever. If you're in the market now, we'd welcome the chance to tell you about, and let you drive, the new trucks. Just give us a call.

ic training to talented boys, regardless of money or social position.

This delightful Disney film uses a simple, pleasant story of the Choir to carry a generous program of the lovely music they sing—music ranging from a High Mass to a Strauss operetta. A golden-voiced newcomer rouses the jealousy of the gifted youngster who has been the Choir's acknowledged star, and some trying incidents occur before the air is cleared. There is more character development than plot in the pranks; the crises, the boyish triumphs and disappointments, and the understanding choir master sees his charges through them all.

The boy's fine, wonderfully trained voices are heard constantly in the luxurious old Augarten Palace which is their home and their school. Their other surroundings have equal distinction — Vienna, the Austrian countryside and the Danube. Four likable English lads play the leading boys' roles, and are supported by popular occasions look and sound almost angelic.

Apple desserts need never be tiring because there are so many ways to prepare them. With a plentiful supply of apples, they can be used often for flavorful baked desserts.

A baked apple dessert with special appeal for children calls for filling cored apples before baking with crushed pineapple. Then after the apples have been baked, top them with marshmallows and return to the oven for a few minutes before serving.

baked, top them with marsh-mallows and return to the oven for a few minutes before serving.

For a colorful dessert, core is some apples, being careful not to cut through the blossom end. Fill the cavity with cranberry sauce. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Then bake in a moderate oven until apples are tender.

A popular dessert is baked apple-cheese. To serve six, fill a pie pan or shallow baking dish with 5 cups of pared apple slices. Sprinkle lightly with lemon juice (to avert darkening) and ¼ cup sugar. For a crispy topping, mix together ½ cup sugar and ½ cup sifted flour and season to taste with cinnamon and salt. Cut in ¼ cup what is so hard, it is the decisions.

For example, grocery shopping takes time and energy. Yet, is this really so hard to take? We say it is, but the more I talk is the outing. It gives us a chance to get out for a while. I really think we rather ensured the cup sugar and ½ cup sifted flour and season to taste with cinnamon and salt. Cut in ¼ cup sugar so the control of the c

Just stop and begin to figure up how many decisions just one grocery shopping trip takes. You'll see just why the decision-making is so hard.

You start with a decision on what store to shop in this time. This is an easy one to make, isn't it? Yet, you consider such things as how much time you have, if you have the ear, how many things you want, what kind of things you want, and how much cash you have on hand (do they cash checks, do they give credit, etc.). These are just a few things that will affect this one simple decision on where to shop.

After you get in the store, where to shop.

After you get in the store, decisions come fast and furious. How many different items do you usually buy during a shopping trip. For most of us, 25 to 30 items is a fairly long shopping list. You have to pick 25 to 30 items from cases, and counters, and shelves that hold 7,000 to 8,000 different items.

7,000 to 8,000 different items.

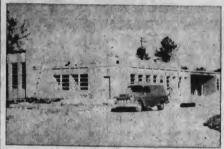

This is even more dramatic if we narrow it down to just one department, meat. You might end up with 8' to 10 different meat items, including sandwich and sausage meats. However, you probably have to choose from among at least 150 different items. You have decided on poultry, beef, lamb, veal or pork. You have decided between fresh and cured. You have decided between the processed items like sandwich meats and the red meats. You have decided whether to take a prepackaged cut or have the butcher cut another one. You have made all these and many other decisions.

decisions. It isn't easy to make all these decisions. As you figure how many you do make in a day, week, or month, one thing is evident. It isn't surprising you make so many decisions that

PEMBROKE

With the County School Board contemplating another five schools to serve the Princess Anne-Aragona Village area within the next few years, workmen are furiously working to complete two for this year and starting another for next year. Pembroke and Malibu Elementary Schools are nearing the completion stage and work has started on the Trantwood plant. The Malibu sign in the above pictures designates the Trantwood School. The picture without a sign is the Malibu School. All three buildings were designed by Waller and Britt Architects and are being built by Fred A. Haycox Company.

SEA HAWK Tid-Bits

By DARLA SUE DESKINS

I do not believe I have ever devoted an entire column to just one event or item concern-ing Virgina Beach High School —but there is always a first time, so here goes.

time, so here goes.

The Seahawks from Virginia Beach High School won their 7th victory last Saturday night.

Their opponent was Holland.

DARLA SUE

We were slated to win 20 to 0, instead we took the game by a mere one point—13. to 12 was the final score. What happened?

There are a lot of things that miss the mark. What is surpris-ing that you make so many that are right.

could of happened, here are some that I, personally, think did occur. First of all the Seahawks had had an eight day layover from their last game—this was against us. Second, Holland High School traditionally loses one and only one game a year—they lost to Southampton the week before we played them, so they wanted to, win this one very much. Holland's enthusiasm for smearing the 'Hawks was spearheaded by a sign that was posted in their gym—in big letters and numbers it told the score of the Holland-Southampton game. Their coach promised to burn the sign in front of the entire student body if their team would take the Seahawks.

Third, I think maybe our team went in with a little too much self-confidence. Don't get me wrong—I would be the first to stand up and say the 'Hawks are the best anywhere, but it's different when a fan brags and a player gets too sure of himself. The sign on the S.C.A bulletin board didn't help to humble the mighty Seahawks. It read, 'Prep picks Virginia Beach 20, Holland 0."

The three things that I have mentioned could have stood in ing that you make so many that are right.

Yet, this isn't a job we can get out of or turn over to some one else. These economic decisions must be made and the number of them that must be made grows day by day. New foods, new fabrics, new clothing have foods, new fabrics, new clothing have the best coach, the best styles, new appliances, new gadgets come on the market every day to swell the number every day to swell the number of decisions to be made. Yet, in spite of all this, do we want to go back to the days of fewer things from which to choose? I going to have to fight harder and to really click when they

time to think about the budget for another year.

This is cause for being thankful. Really it is!

For aren't there many places in this world where men haven't any opportunity to support their

And aren't there many places where men are compelled to work for causes they do not believe

Frankly, much of the responsibility for keeping our land and our people what we want them to be rests with our Churches.

So let's rejoice in that happy American tradition—the Church budget.

Your Social Security

Remarks like, "It's southing you set at 68" and "You can't earn over $100 a month," have been popular ones for many years even though they are not necessarily true. When the law is changed, specific informational programs are set up to reach those persons affected; but many people either do not take the time to check their social security standing or think that the information they previously received may fine to complete the menu. Butter gives an unsurpassed flavor lift to other foods. Used sa recipe ingredient, or as the spread proudly served on the previously served as a recipe ingredient, or as the spread proudly served on the previously served on the previously served as a recipe ingredient, or as the spread proudly served on the previously served on the previous to select a brand you may offer consistent fine quality. After purchasing butter, let no more time than eccessary lapse before storing it in the refrigerator. Under proper conditions, butter keeps well for several weeks in the refrigerator and from six to nine months in the freezer. Butter should be kept in its original protective foil wrapper and waxed carton until serving time. Serve only as much as you think will be used at one time, as repeated trips from refrigerator to table result in flavor loss.

With this background, John John Wareing naturally became interested in various body-building activities. He was a professional boxer and wrestler, and is a greduate in Ju-Jitsu from the Honolulu Police Department. He performed professionel feats of strength for 12 years, appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show and "You Asked For It," and was featured in Life Magezine.

His Navy career took him to the Southwest Pacific and Korea. Asked if he has any ambition for his children to follow him and his father as physical culturists, Wareing said his first concern is to help them develop healthy bodies and get a good education... then their choice of a vocation will be up to them. "But," he continued, "if one of them decides on this field as a career. I will be very pleased."

While the use of a helicopter seems to offer simplicity of reporting, the job becomes quite complicated. For instance, while flying at minimum allowable altitude, the observer notes an accident on a main thorough fare. He will not only pin-point the location of the road blockage but will also suggest alternate routes naming streets and avenues motorists may take to detour the congested roadway. Therefore, the reporter must familiarize himself with one-way and dead-end streets in Norfolk and also in Portsmouth, Newport News, and Hampton, and the county areas surrounding these metro hubs. Annexation—Why? ...pag

The battle of Annexation—where a city tries to take over a suburb on its fringes—is being fought on many fronts. The trouble starts when hard-pressed metropolitan planners seek new sources of revenue, and suburban taxpayers, in their turn, fight recapture by the big-city "machine." Here is a report on the fascinating—and urgent—problems that plague the big cities and the towns involved with them.

GETTING AROUND

... to Our Pleasant Places and People

A CORRESPONDENT in Manchester, Connecticut, heard about a woman who went to a California bank and requested a 90-day personal loan of $4,000. After she had filled out the proper forms, the woman was asked how she intended to use the money. She hesitated and then explained that the savings-and-loan association across the street was giving trading stamps with each deposit. If she deposited the $4,000 for 90 days, she would have enough trading stamps to get the typewriter she had always wanted. The loan was granted.

We wonder how the police in Whitefish Bay, Wisconsin, are doing with a recent ordinance passed by the village trustees. It seems that resident cats are required to be "under control" at all times, but the village fathers left it strictly up to police to decide when a feline is "delinquent."

Grace S. Douglas, a teacher in San Mateo County, California, writes us how a straight-backed little first grader impressed his classmates by announcing he was one-quarter Blackfoot Indian.

At recess that day, he fell on the playground and cut his knee. Miss Douglas applied a bandage to the wound, but the child continued to cry.

"Oh come now," she said, "it can't hurt that much."

"It isn't the hurt," he sobbed, "but I might lose my Indian blood."

This one comes from Metairie, Louisiana, and rings true . . . There was a young mother, it seems, who had always made a point of concealing a prematurely white streak in her dark hair, but when streaking became popular she decided to highlight her natural asset. Her nine-year-old son was the first to notice the change: "Gee, Mother, you look great!" he said. "Just like a akunk."

After teaching her class the words to "America the Beautiful," a teacher in a school near Glendale. Missouri, heard one voice singing above all the rest, "O beautiful for space-ship skies."

So they guaranteed the paper to Mr. Hank for the rest of his life. Mrs. Thomas Swallenberg of Pasa-dena, Maryland, came up with a novel way of notifying friends and neighbors on the day her first grand child was horn. She stitched a "fist

Four-year-old Debbie was visiting her grandmother in Oakwood, Ohio, when she spied some of Grandma's perfume on the dresser, She asked if she could use a little and promptly put a dab on the front of her dress. Travelmanship

BY STEPHEN POTTER

The famous authority on "Lifemanship" explains how to be "one up" on your friends, no matter who has taken the trip

STEPHEN POTTER, master strategist at gettiing the better of one's opponent (without actually cheating), is the author of "Lifemanship," "Gamesmanship," and "One-upmanship," all three of which have been republished this fall in an omnibus edition called "Three-upmanship" (Holt, Rinehart, and Winston). In these three unique works, Potter suggests a series of intricate oral maneuvers—his famous "ploys"—to discomfort or outsmart other people in a variety of social situations. The player who follows Potter's tongue-in-cheek advice is always "one up" on his adversary, but the playing is good-natured.

Potter is a Britisher completely at home in our American suburbs. We've asked him what he'd recommend to squelch the overly enthusiastic returning traveler who'll bore you with his adventures and never give you a chance to tell about your own—and what you can do, if you're a traveler, to impress everyone with your aplomb. In a word, this article tells what to do if he's coming, or you're going.

I. HOW TO BRING A RETURNING TRAVELER DOWN TO EARTH

H OLIDAYS AND TRAVELS are of total benefit to one's social standing. University education is fine, too, but written over the doors of the non-lecture room at our Lifemanship College is the phrase "Without meat, there can be no digestion." Travel refreshes the spirit, enlarges the intellect, and widens the soul. More important still is the fact that to have just come back from a holiday is a classic one-up position. The returning traveler is bubbling with desire to lord it over you.

Whatever the facts, Just Back will let it be known that he has been fortunate in the weather and that he is either (a) bursting with health or (b) deliciously wearied by a series of fantastically late nights. ("In Madrid, we never get up till four in the afternoon.") Extraordinary distances will have been swum by his quite young children, and there will be at least two signed menus from five-starred restaurants. Unbelievably coincidental meetings will have been achieved in the Golf Hotel, Marbella, with a couple of old bridge opponents, although, with certain qualifications, he has been originally personal in his choice of route. Films and photographs will tell his "unmatchable" story.

It is in just this kind of situation that Lifemanship can be valuable to you. Our basic defense is prepared for you, the Still There, the man who hasn't been away at all. Just Back versus Still at Home.

That is the classic battle.

Still There should begin with a strong "Well, tell us all about it," and then throw out slightly off-putting phrases—"ployish ambiguities," we have called them. Say "Deductible, I suppose? No?" Or "Well you are a tremendous color—brown, I mean" (as if it wasn't totally brown). Or you can say "I can see you're tired . . . peaky . . . the journey back."

An alternative opening is to say "I suppose you've been away . . . isn't that like life? . . . this is my time for 'At Home.' It's not that I loathe holidays, but do you know when it's empty I begin to love this place?"

Just Back will be at his most unassailable if he has returned from basically desirable and famous spots such as Ischia or Antibes. Start by saying to him, "It's not true, is it, that it's completely spoilt . . that it's a sort of ant's nest? Tell me, are people now beginning to troop a little bit farther south to Rischia (presumably the next island), where one little tugboat steamer calls only once a week? Who was it who was raving to me about it?"

It is always possible to suggest that it is the other place next door which has not yet been discovered by the masses. Suppose your friend has gone to his favorite beach in Western Europe. You, too, when you were a child, loved La Zoute and the little shop with the 150 different kinds of ice cream, but when you got older you discovered the long, uninhabited beaches of Normandy, at Omanville. "You know it? But that's where you went? Ah, for me the firm white sands of Benodet, which has the additional advantage of facing south." Or you can switch to Spain. "But you did not surely bathe in the Atlantic? Superman. I can't put a toe in the Atlantic north of Mogador." Then there is a special way of inquiring about the Mediterranean. "You bathed in the sea at that place?"

If Just Back has been to a truly desirable and fashionable spot, it may be better to assume a knowledge of it which goes a good deal deeper than anything the flitter-by-night pleasure visitor can achieve. Say: "Did you meet Father Dominic?"

"No—who is Father Dominic?" Reply irrelevantly either (1) "I worked for six months as a waiter in the Ritz-Blakeney... that was my father's idea of getting to know things from the bottom," or (2) "I never go there now: my father lost half the family fortune there in 1932—some venture." (Note that put-off trips should be founded however tenuously on fact. The Lifeman is truthful. "Some venture" could refer to the loss of 50 francs playing boule.)

At some point, Just Back will show photographs and films of his holiday. There are various ways of dealing with this. A decent method, if one has the nerve, is to make absolutely no comment whatever. My friend Odoreida, never to be imitated, was yet quite effective when, after seeing a film of one of the very youngest children playing on the sands, he used to say, in a small compressed voice: "Funny little run she's got." Since all young children are knock-kneed or bowlegged this may start an anxiety sequence in the parents, who will stop showing films of their children.

Perhaps the best method of treating the returning traveler is this gambit of total indifference. My club, the Brook Street, has a final way of polishing off the man who has just come back from being much photographed on a cruise in an o.k. yacht in the Acolian Sea or has spent nine mouths discovering a new source of the Wagga Wagga in darkest Australia or has sailed the Pacific singlehanded. When with relaxed blue eyes and sculptured mahogany face still looking at the distance he returns to the club, he will find that not only will nobody take the slightest notice of him, he will, in a smooth yet definite way, be aest to Coventry.

II. HOW YOU CAN BE A SMOOTH, IN-THE-KNOW TRAVELER

The time comes when you too will take a holiday. As a World Lifeman, you must prepare for this by establishing yourself as something deeper, as a traveler, than mere holiday—the Holiday Traveler as distinct from the Seasoned Travelman is a type forever one down. The Holiday Traveler overdoes excitement and preparation to such an extent that 24 hours before the thing begins he is talking to his family in an unnaturally quiet, controlled, and definite voice. Everybody knows that this is going to lead up to some remark on the morning of departure like "Whether it's right or wrong, let's go by this timetable I've worked out, shall we?" This organizer will be full of mistakes from start to finish. He will make such basic errors as cramming his luggage with clothes and items suitable for a holiday, whereas, of course, if one should include anything out of the way, it should be a general defense against exceptionally cold or wet weather. Never, incidentally, be caught out by this. And do not, if it rains, look miserable and personally hurt. On the contrary your face should light up. "The vines are longing for this," you should say.

The specialist knows that it is right to have either very little or very much luggage: but if very much, it should not be seen—above all, it must never be allowed to explode into tiresome and untidy et ceteras crammed into an inadequate handgrip. Remember the ideal. If you can't be Diplomatic Service, you should nevertheless be taking aircraft from Le Bourget to Warsaw and step on and off the plane hatless, carrying nothing whatever, as if you were going one stop on a subway. Do not, in other words, completely alter your life because you are going on holiday. Do not ever carry a guidebook and a phrase book. So far as the guidebook is concerned, possess a dozen, but they must be mugged up beforehand.

FIRST IN LATIN AMERICA FIRST ON THE PACIFIC FIRST ON THE ATLANTIC FIRST 'ROUND THE WORLD MUSIC MEANS SO MUCH TO ME, has been such an integral part of my life, that I sometimes find it difficult to believe that there are those who have not shared this joy.

The vivid and happy memories of my youth revolve around music.

I can still see Sergei Rachmaninoff, standing solemnly on the stage of the San Francisco Civic Auditorium, following a series of concerts in which he had played all of his piano concertos. He was stern and unamiling, bowing stiffly in response to the audience's thunderous ovation.

I remember my excitement at hearing George Gershwin play his "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Concerto in F" in the San Francisco Opera House, and my overwhelming happiness on being taken heckstage to meet him. When Gershwin died at such an 'early age, I felt as though a loved member of my family had been taken from me.

I recall the delightful moments of conversation with the great conductor Pierre Monteux following his San Francisco concerts. I called him "Papa Pierre" and he called me "Little Pierre." Behind that walrus-like mustache and the bushy eyebrows, his eyes twinkled and his expressive face revealed the emotion and understanding which he pours into his music.

I can still see the staircase in my family's home, its walls lined with pictures of our famous guests: Pablo Casals, Enrico Caruso, Madame Schumann-Heink, Harold Bauer—musicians my father had brought to Salt Lake City when he took a brief fling at being an impresario.

I remember the disbelief with which I first heard the composer Henry Cowell play one of his strange-sounding piano compositions. I winced as he brought his arms crashing down on the keyboard to create a musical effect, or leaned into the piano and plucked the strings with his fingers. Today, as I listen to records of Cowell music, they sound tame and almost classical.

All this is to say that music can be a joy and a solace. It should be part of the fiber of life. I say "should be." because in too many American families it is not.

We are a proud nation with a proud cultural heritage. But because we have had the facts of European culture drummed into us with such regularity and effectiveness, we tend to underplay and even downgrade—our own.

Worse than that: we have allowed the impression to grow that so-called "good" music is only for highbrows and intellectuals; that for young Americans to be practicing an instrument instead of playing Little League baseball is a demonstration of qualities which I can only describe as un-red-blooded." And in this way, millions of our children miss out on something that could greatly enrich their lives.

I am not advocating massive doses of good music for boys and girls. Nor do I wish to minimize what I consider a mighty contribution to music— American jazz. Our young people should come to appreciate the music played by Benny Goodman and Louis Armstrong or, in a more modern vein, Dave Brubeck. They will find they get more out of jazz if they have a solid foundation in classical music. Modern contrapuntal jazz is a direct throwback to Bach and Vivaldi, and enjoying the former can be greatly enhanced through an understanding of the latter.

Now I would like to personalize all this by telling you what I am doing to bring music into my own children's lives.

I consider them rether normal children. They like to play Little League baseball, and we have a tough time getting them to do their homework; they even, alas, like some of the worst of the current teen-age song hits. But in a kind of happy cooperative program we are giving them a foundation in good music by making music fun.

Two or my children play the piano—not well, but they enjoy it. My youngest boy plays the violin, and shows some talent. When I come home from work in the evening, we play good music on our record player. During dinner, we sometimes have contests, and the kids try to figure out in which period a piece of music was written, who wrote it and, in exceptional cases, the actual name of the composition. It's a fine game, and they're all making progress. We try to make concertgoing a family project, and when my youngest son, Stephen, plays in a musical competition, we all try to get there to hear him and give him some moral support. When musician friends of mine come to town, we invite them over for supper and let the children sit in on the conversation. You cannot spend three or four hours listening to Isaac Stern talk about music, culture in general, and the great needs of our country in these fields, without a little bit rubbing off on you. We all watch Leonard Bernstein conduct the New York Philharmonic on television.

This is taking good music, not in enormous doses, but in quantities that most young people can respond to. And I think the children will be the better for it.

For music is a common thread that runs through lives all over the world. In a time of terrible strife, it can help to cut across the barriers that divide us. It is universal and it is unifying.

One need only read the reports of the Eastman Rochester Orchestra after its recent tour of the Soviet Union. They were wildly received, everywhere they went. And the basic reason was the excellence of their music. When I was in Moscow, the young American pianist Byron Janis played a concert and was called back for 31 curtain calls!

So let all of us—young and old—try to make music a more important part of our lives—not just to prove that we are "cultured," but because we will enjoy it. It will mean something to us. It will bring us happiness. It will bring us peace. And it will bring us a greater understanding of the artistic ties that bind all men together.

So You Want a Horse?

Every Saturday morning 14-year-old Babs Benson, her younger sisters Linda and Diane, and 18 of their friends gather at the Benson home in suburban Atlanta for a meeting of the Sandy Springs Pony Club. After talking for a while about the proper care of their horses and equipment, the 21 girls go for a trail ride. Sometimes they'll go on an all-day picnic trip to the Chattahoochee River, nine miles away. When they're hungry, the pony club riders stop at a Sandy Springs soda shop. Tying their horses is no problem; Sandy Springs has so many riders these days many stores have built old-fashioned hitching posts in front.

The Bensons, who bought their first horse five years ago and now have four, are one of the growing numbers of suburban families who keep horses in a back-yard barn or a converted garage. Thirty years ago, only a relatively few people could afford the costs of maintaining a stable, grooms, and horses. But since World War II, many thousands of suburbanites have discovered that a back-yard acre or two is plenty of room for a horse. and a garage makes a fine stable. As for grooms-well, in this do-ityourself age, everyone's a groom.

One equine expert, Dr. M. E. Ensminger, chairman of the department of animal science at Washington State University in Pullman, estimates that about 288,000 suburban families own 433,000 horses, an average of 1.5 horses per family. Dr. Ensminger figures the number of pleasure horses in the U.S. is now about 1,300,000—300,000 more than 10 years ago. The boom in riding is bringing joy to saddle and bridle salosmen, too. Miller Harness Co., Inc., of New York, one of the largest such tack stores.

says its sales last year were double those of three years ago.

The first consideration in buying your own horse is to decide what you'll want to do with the horse and what you can afford to spend. "Buying a horse is like buying a car," says one suburban horse lover. "You've got to be careful." Adds Mrs. Warren Benson, Babs' mother, "Be sure to buy from a reputable dealer. He should let you take the horse home for a week to see if he likes you and you like him. If the dealer won't let you try the horse out for a few days, don't buy him. And never buy your first horse at an auction. You may think you'll get him cheaper, but once you've bought him you can't take him back," she explains.

Horses are classified by breeds, as dogs are, depending on size, color, and other factors. Owners of most purebred horses have formed associations to keep a registry of all horses of their breed, sponsor shows and auctions, and publish information about the breed. But some horses' breeding isn't known, of course. If you want a horse just for pleasant trail riding, you'll probably find that nearly any comfortable and peaceable steed of unknown ancestry will be fine.

"I find that people in the East generally like any kind of rangy but quiet horse," declares R. A. Phillips, an Ocala, Florida, horse breeder. You can buy such a horse, which, may be perfect for your needs, for between $150 and $250.

In the West, horses of registered and known breeding are more popular, Mr. Phillips says. If you hope to do some jumping or foxhunting or polo playing, or if you plan to enter your horse in shows, you'll want one whose breeding is registered, since most eyents are designed for specific breeds.

By far, the most popular riding horse is the American quarter horse. Its breed association in Amarillo, Texas, has some 251,770 quarter horses registered—about a quarter of all pleasure horses in the United States. Their popularity is probably partly due to the fact that the quarter horse is the real western cow horse that cowboys still use to rope steers because it can run very fast for a quarter-mile. But quarter horses are also noted for their gentle disposition, obedience, and good health. Because of their popularity they're also among the most expensive of the major breeds; last year the average auction price for quarter horses was $1,604, up from $1,500 in 1960. Some quarter horses, to be used for breeding, sold for as much as $40,000.

Another horse that's rapidly growing in popularity is the Appaloosa, a spotted horse that has a calm disposition and an easy ride. Appaloosas were originated by the Nez Perce Indians in the Palouse area of Idaho, from which they got their name. The breed's registrations are doubling every year. Recent Appaloosa prices have averaged around $500.

Other popular breeds are the Tennessee Walking Horse, the American Saddlebred, and the Morgan horse, but these are more often used for showing than for pleasure riding. Shetland ponies, long one of the most popular animals for children, are found less often in back yards these days, both because they're less gentle than such horses as the Appaloosa and because they're too small for teen-agers and parents to ride. You can buy a Tennessee Walking Horse or a Morgan for between $1,000 and $1,500 at auction.

"You don't need a lot of land to keep a horse," says F. P. Ryder, who keeps two horses in his back yard at Cuyahoga Falls, an Akron, Ohio, suburb. "A half-acre to an acre is enough if you feed the horse hay and oats."

The suburban ranch house is living up to its name...as families discover it's not hard to keep a horse in the back vard BY PETER VANDERWICKEN

Mr. Ryder's five children take turns riding the two "rangy old western ponies," which are kept in an old barn.

"An owner should be within striking distance of a place where the horse can get some exercise-riding trails, woods, or an open road," Mr. Ryder says.

"It's not good for a horse to stand unridden," agrees Babs Benson. "We ride almost every day, depending on how much homework we have to do. If you're going to have a horse, you should ride him every day."

The Bensons figure they spend about $350 a year to feed each horse. Hay, oats, and the back-yard's grass are the principal diet, but the horses also need a salt lick, mounted on a short pole in the yard. They must be shod every two or three months; a blacksmith's visit costs $7 per horse. And Mr. Ryder figures that two visits a year from a veterinarian are necessary. The vet will charge $8 to $10 a visit.

There are other costs of horse-owning, too. A secondhand saddle will cost at least $35 or $40, a new one $65 or more. Real enthusiasts can, if they wish, spend up to $50,000 for a silver-studded saddle. A used bridle will cost you about $5, a new one $15. In addition, you'll need grooming equipment: a currycomb and brush, oil for saddles and bridles, liniments for both horse and rider, and a hoof pick-all of which will cost you at least $10. Mrs. Benson points out that some costs will vary, depending on just what you need. For example, you'll probably want to convert your garage to a stable, adding feed boxes and racks for storing hay. Or you may find it necessary to build a barn from scratch, Mr. Benson began building his eight-stall barn, with a separate tack and feed room, on weekends five years ago. He's just now installing electric lines so the family can work in the barn after riding at night.

NEW HORSE OWNER will need to build a fence around A his yard. The material for a four-rail wooden corralstyle fence costs about $1 a foot; you'll need about 800 feet to enclose an acre lot. The family may also need some riding lessons; $3 an hour for 10 hours is a standard group rate. And riding clothes will be essential. You'll need at least a pair of riding boots and jodhpurs, the traditional riding pants, to protect your legs. Depending on quality, you can pay anywhere from $25 to $75 for these.

All told, buying and keeping a horse for a year is likely to cost at least $1,900, although in later years the cost will go down to only around $400-the cost of feed, shoes, and veterinarian. Some owners lower their own costs by stabling horses for neighbors for perhaps $1.50 or $2 a day. Also, per-horse costs go down if you own several horses since you can buy hay and oats more cheaply in larger, truckload lots than in smaller quantities.

So You Want a Horse?

You may even find there are some tax advantages to being an equine enthusiast. The Bensons, for example, buy all their feed and supplies under the name of "Balidi farm," thus saving Georgia's 3% sales tax, which is not levied on agricultural equipment or supplies. But in most states a horse is considered personal property and thus will add a few dollars to your local property-tax bill.

PROSPECTIVE horse owners should also be sure to check any local ordinances that may interfere with keeping a horse in their yard. In Akron, for example, barbed-wire fences are illegal in the city or neighboring towns, so horse owners must use wooden fences. In the Atlanta area, barns must be built at least 200 feet from a property line -but a garage is not considered a barn. In most of Chicago's northern suburbs, village ordinances forbid owners keeping horses within the villages. Most horse owners living in the villages along Lake Michigan keep their horses at one of the area's five large stables. Northwestern Stables in Morton Grove, for example, boards horses for 46 local families.

"A lot of people in this area have three or four horses here," says James Bernhard, a foreman at Lake Forest's Onwentsia Stables.

Many California communities also have antihorse ordinances. Several communities in the Los Angeles area, such as Flintridge, near Pasadena, have recently passed such laws. A new Santa Cruz ordinance says horses presently housed in yards may stay, but residents may not acquire additional horses And barns and stables within Santa Cruz may continue to be used, but they can't be expanded.

It's a good idea, if you're planing to buy a horse, to ask the neighbors if they'd mind. Many of the California antihorse ordinances are being passed because residents objected to an occasional neigh or a few garden flowers being nibbled by a neighbor's horse. One result of these new laws is that "many people who really love horses and have been faced with the new ordinances, are moving farther out in the country where their neighbors won't object," says Mrs. Hermann Friedlaender, a Soquel, California, horsewoman and a regional supervisor of U.S. Pony Clubs.

FOR A TEEN-AGER, owning a riding horse can be especially fun.
Some 5,000 suburban teen-agers are members of 104 Pony Clubs across the country. The clubs, besides sponsoring trail rides, teach youngsters how to ride and care for their horses and equipment. In some communities, such organizations as the YMCA sponsor riding classes. Other groups, such as 4-H clubs, hold shows and contests.

Later on, after you and your steed have become good companions, you may want to try some of the more exotic equine activities: polo, jumping, or fox hunting. When that time arrives, you'll probably wonder how you ever got along without a horse!

Mugg up-bone up-that is the one big secret of one-up traveling. Do not, for instance, in Granada peer at a guidebook and say, "The battlements were torn down by Osbert the Humpbacked in 1282." But say, dreamily, "Can't you see them? These impoverished satraps struggling with strange tongue and a stranger race, trying to establish themselves against these blackto establish themselves against these black-eyed peasants who loathed them, and I expect knew how to show it?"

The question of foreign languages and whether to speak them is a gigantic one. But no doubt I should attempt to summarize it in a few words. Do not, if in France, for instance, suddenly say "Esker," like Mr. Podsnap, and then stop dead. Gesture is far better than phrase-book phrases. But remember that only tremendously eminent people or personages who travel with a secretary should make no attempt whatever to speak the language of the country. This is bad manners. Show that you know what's what here by saying early on, "They were so delighted in Helsinki when I said a few words to them in Finnish." If attempting French to a waiter, speak it in a low, quiet voice, quickly, even if you are speaking nonsense.

EARN AT LEAST one truly idiomatic phrase, and you will find it can be repeated in 50 different tones of voice. I have toured the whole of Scandinavia on the words vil han klare pynten. Originally used of a fishing boat in a squall-"Will she round the point?" it means-as a metaphor it is open to endless interpretations.

Some rules for holiday one-upness are easy to formulate. One-upness in where to stay follows a hard and fast rule. Avoid your compatriots. Cut them dead if you know them. Bend deep over your book. Therefore, never stay at an "Americantype" hotel. Stay at something smaller, more native. Better still, at a friend's villa.

Failing that, say that you prefer to stay at hotel (name the small one) because you feel freer to visit your many friends and won't make L. and F. jealous because you have chosen to stay with Y.

When to go. The important this is to be either one thing or the other. If you wish to be correctly seasonal, turn up on the very day the casino opens, if this is correct timing. And do it every year, being found sitting in your old blue shorts at the same table in the same bar. However prim your home life may be, it is possible in this way to suggest the atmosphere of the rotter. the man without ambition, hypnotized by habit. The drifter.

Alternatively, the deliberate off-season gambit has much to be said for it. The Lido in March, half-blotted out by fog. Le Touquet battened down against the nor'wester.

The Travelman is careful of his spare time, and one thing he-or she-does not do is to spend the whole time trying to get sunburned, poised between metal reflectors. The sun tan can possibly best be done privately, in a hospital, by ray. Then, in the actual sun, make a point of shielding your face.

Perhaps the most one-up traveler is the man doing something. Geology. Photography. The Pinstripe Kestrel on its nest, Writing on 17-century architecture. Once you are known as a calmly expert traveler, a traveler with a purpose, perhaps with a touch of Maugham or Secret Service, the Just Back will lose his superiority.

When you get back and your friend asks: "Are you glad to be home?" you can adapt a thought of Bernard Shaw's though you needn't acknowledge your source. "I'm always homesick," you say. "Homesick for the clear bright air of Mykonos, for the little flowers at the base of the Jungfrau. for the mud flats round Wapping Old Stairs. . . . " Quite soon, your friend will be sorry he spoke.

If your gardener is a beginner, you'll hardly do better than to give him any of the basic rake-hoe-spade-trowel assortments, choosing durable and well-made ones such as those sold under the trade name of Speedline. Any gardener would welcome a scuffle hoe-sometimes called a Dutch or English hoe-which has a squared blade set parallel to the ground and sharpened on the front and back edges so that it cuts weeds as it is pushed back and forth just below

Possibly the most versatile and indispensable of garden tools is the spreader, used to sow lawn seed and distribute fertilizers and granular weed-and-insect-killer mixes. One of the best is made by Scott's.

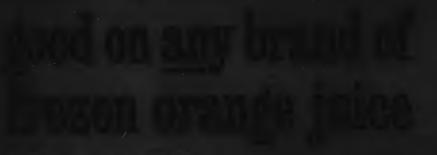

Power mowers of either reel or rotary type, either gasoline or electric powered, are a real boon. There are many sizes and makes ranging from some small enough to be used in a back yard to riding types for estate-sized lawns. If he already has a mower, consider presenting a lawn sweeper of the sort made by Parker. It will whisk off lawn clippings, leaves, and other light debris.

A lawn edger for trimming beside walks and driveways enables the gardener to omit hand trimming. Ottcraft Products Co. makes a reel-type edger which is hand-operated (no power) that is both inexpensive and effective. Also, consider a lawn sprinkler such as the Sherman Traveler which will wind up on its own hose, sprinkling any pattern you may select. Smaller sprinklers make good gifts, too.

Powered garden plows are also useful for those with large enough gardens to warrant their use, and many makes of varying sizes are available. For those with hedges or evergreens that need trimming, an electric clipper is a godsend. It may also be used to cut down perennials in the fall, for trimming coarse weeds, and for clipping under fences where lawn mowers will not go. Pruning tools of all sorts are always welcome. For pruning twigs in treetops and to thin out and remove branches before they cause trouble, there is nothing to equal the long-handled pole pruner.

For those who start seeds indoors or who root house plants, the Jack Pot is an excellent gift. These are pressed peat pots and often are available in sets with plastic trays in which the pots fit so that the seedlings can be set into them in soil. Pot and all are planted outdoors and the roots soon penetrate the peat to reach the soil and start growing. And of course there are the seed offers, or you can make up your own seed-packet gift.

And last, a gardener of our acquaintance some years after her marriage besought her husband to stop giving her expensive lacy underthings for Christmas and instead get her our favorite present; a load of manure! She said it would not only make her Christmas merry but would assure her a profitable gardening year.

It Takes Two to Make One Career

When Irving Stone wrote his 672-page best seller, "The Agony and the Ecstasy," his wife, as usual, was his editor, business manager, typist, and researcher

Often the Stones are abroad setting

WHEN YOU start out on your own, it takes two to make one good career. I don't believe in two careers in one family. I don't see enough of it working out-not two first-rate careers.

My first eagerness to help my husband did not spring from special training in literature and the arts but from the desire that he should have more time for family life, for the children, and for relaxation.

We live a kind of black and white existence. Between books we travel and do no work. When we are home, we are completely at home. We go out very little and work very hard.

My husband is the hardest working man I ever met. He drives himself harder than any outside boss ever would. The most important thing in his life is the book. He is not really interested in articles or short stories-just the book.

The book has always come first in our household. First he fits himself into the routine. Then I have to fit in, then the children-but first, last, and always, the book.

When my daughter was little, she was confused that her daddy worked at home while other fathers went to an office. He also worked every day in the week and evenings, too.

"You know, Mommy, I wish Daddy was a butcher. Then he would take Sundays off."

I realized then that we would have to make some compromises, so we began by taking half of Sunday off, then all of Sunday. We would read quietly but also would do something with the children.

When two people in a household are working, and so much of America has that situation now, they are fortunate if both can be working and both can be free at the same time, as we are.

My husband's books are planned years in advance. So two years before he started work on "The Agony and the Ecstasy," I enrolled in Italian courses at the University of California. Then when we went to Italy, I was able to hire a staff, get the researchers who would help us, locate a house, and get it organized.

Our first apartment in Florence was so beautiful. It had the most fantastic view of the city. I kept thinking, after we had leased it, how could I be so lucky? How could it be that no one has wanted this lovely apartment! The next day I learned why. There was little water pressure in the building. Water could not quite make it to the fifth floor. We had a lovely view of the Duomo and the Baptistry, but we lugged water for two months before we moved to the hills surrounding Florence.

Keeping house in our villa in Fiesole was a real joy because it came completely staffed. The cook and the general maid called herself "the government of the house." She ran everything so that I was able to be at the University of Florence at eight o'clock in the morning and to work all day and all evening.

We also had many, many guests who were studying in all parts of Italy. "The government of the house" never cared when our guests came or when they left or how many extra there were for dinner.

We had been used to eating with the children at six. Now with Paula back at the University of California and Kenneth at school in Switzerland, we could work right on through to seven or eight or nine.

I F WE HAD a half-hour free, we could walk over to the piazza, sit down and watch the traffic go by. We did not need formal dates in order to see people. The Italians live in the streets. Living at home within your four walls you tend to forget how nice it is to see people passing.

Americans think that all of the Italians would like to come to the United States or all of the Italians would like to have a television set. It simply isn't so.

My neighbors did not want a tv set of their own. Nor did they want to sit in a room and laugh by themselves. They wanted to go down to the little corner cafe where they could buy one coffee for 50 lire. High on the wall was a tv, and all the chairs were turned that way. They would sit with their neighbors and the passing traffic, and they would all laugh together. It was fun. They did not want to be closed within their own walls with their own tv.

The Italian women do not like to stay home at all. They do their chores, get dressed in their impeccable suits and their white gloves, and go out early. They do their marketing, and little boys deliver the flowers and vegetables and meat they buy. Then they go and window shop. Or they order dresses that take endless, endless fittings. Or they sit in the cafes and watch the human traffic. The causes, the movements which we American women are so endlessly caught up in, do not exist there.

Working on mying's biographical novel of Michelangelo was very exciting. Here was a man who was a poet, architect, sculptor, painter, and engineer living in one of the richest periods in history—the Renaissance.

There are many praiseworthy men but to write about them is difficult because, unlike Michelangelo, they really never come into crisis, come into conflict. They are noteworthy, they are creative, but their lives do not have that wonderful managainst-the-gods, man-against-fate quality, that solid wall that you crack your head against until finally it gives. To have a story, you need conflict.

Our two years in Italy, walking where this great artist had walked, visiting the quarries where he got his marble, talking with his countrymen, viewing his art were stimulating. But like anything else you do, there is always plain hard work. The Italian libraries were a great vexation. They closed for four hours in the midafternoon. They closed for innumerable festivals, and although they kept every scrap of paper only the Vatican library was catalogued. The voltage in Italy is very low, so another problem was working with poor light. I feel that I gave my eyesight to the research for that book.

When we returned to California, we were practically in isolation for two years. My husband wrote continuously, and I edited and typed. My friends gasp when they hear that aside from his original drafts, I retyped the manuscript of "The Agony and the Ecstasy" seven times and proofread it twice.

It's all part of helping your husband.

Who Needs Annexation?

A few suburbs are willing to join their cities... more are fighting to keep their independence

BY GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT

IN MANY metropolitan areas of the United States, annexation is once more a burning issue.

We're going to take you in! cry the big-city expansionists. We're going to fence you in! retorts defiant suburbia.

To City Hall, desperately seeking resources to meet mounting demands for municipal services and tormented by the knowledge that more and more of the daytime users of these services are paying taxes elsewhere, annexation promises to add more taxpayers and more scope for the area-wide planning which is considered crucial for the city's future.

To Mr. and Mrs. Homebody, happily established with the little Homebodies in their suburban split-level with its rectangle of grassland, the idea of annexation—recapture by the big-city "machine"—looms as a peril to their chosen way of life and to the future of their children.

So, in the legislative chambers of state capitols and around the fringes of exploding cities, the annexation battle is on—with results of interesting variety.

Consider, for example, the case of Brown Deer, Wisconsin, a village which was originally part of the town of Granville, on the northern outskirts of Milwaukee, Milwaukee city planners are ardent advocates of the expanding city. They believe in taking time by the forelock, for which purpose they have established a frankly named city Department of Annexation. The 20 square miles of Granville town were high on the department's shopping list in 1954. But a group of embattled Homebodies in one section of the town filed an incorporation petition as the Village of Brown Deer. An incorporated village, under Wisconsin law, can't be annexed without the consent of its citizens. There was a hassle in the courts, Brown Deer won, and stands proud and inviolate on the frontier of the metropolis. Not satisfied with this victory, however, Brown Deer incorporators filed annexation papers in their turn, covering the rest of Granville. This time they came out on the short end-the courts said the city had priority.

This lively affair—made livelier by the pitch of feeling aroused among those concerned—illustrates the vigor with which some city planners seek to prevent having the expansion of their city cut off by suburban incorporations. It also illustrates a new technique developed by the suburbs, which might be called defensive incorporation: not just incorporating your own home area, but anticipating its future growth by fencing the city off from the land next door.

Many furiously fought elections to decide annexation proposals have taken place; the result has often depended on the skill with which the campaign was conducted.

IN NASHVILLE, a "metropolitan government" proposal for the city of Nashville and Davidson county lost in 1958 through failure to work the grass roots. The antis, who were short of funds, held their fire till the last week before election and then did a concentrated job in the county areas with slogans: "Do you want a $6 tax rate?"-"Do you want to see your home sold for taxes?"-"Save your freedom!"--"Don't vote for BIG GOVERNMENT!" The outside "No" vote beat a 62% "Yes" vote in the city. But in 1961 the city of Nashville succeeded in annexing some 23 square miles of reluctant suburban territory, arousing considerable antagonism. The chickens came home to roost in 1962, when the proposal for a metropolitan government to include Nashville and the rest of Davidson County was revived. The Mayor of Nashville, who had supported "Metro" in 1958, opposed the 1962 proposition (presumably satisfied with the 1961 annexation), but the still-outraged voters of the annexed areas turned out to get even with His Honor regardless, and voted "Yes." In the county areas the supporters of "Metro" were far better organized than in 1958, with a well-managed speakers' bureau and a zealous women's division 1,500 strong. The proposal won this time both in the city and county areas-one more illustration of the value of thorough

Coercion—for instance, using city-owned water rights as a club—was once used, though later abandoned, by Los Angeles. Milwaukee and Columbus, Ohio, have been accused of similar practices in more recent times. In Lima, Ohio, refusal of an extension of the city's sewer system induced one desperate development promoter to incorporate a pledge to support an annexation petition in the deeds which home purchasers had to sign.

This device, the city solicitor reports happily, has brought about four annexations in two years, with two others pending-the first extensions of the city's boundaries in 30 years.

New legislative approaches are also in the wind. Spurred by the urgent timepressure for some solution of the manifold problems of the "exploding city," several states have been examining devices by which final decision might be lodged with an impartial agency capable of judging the need of urban regions as a whole.

Pioneering in this direction is the Virginia Plan, which has been in operation in that state since 1902. The basis of the plan is a legal separation of cities and counties, with recognition that urban territory should be under city government, rural territory 'under county government. Virginia holds that annexation is a legal, not a political question, and that the correct way to approach it is through judicial process.

A Virginia city may propose the annexation of adjacent county territory by ordinance. The proposal then comes before an annexation court of three judges-one from the circuit court of the county concerned, the other two from remote counties of the state. Any interested party-the city, the county, individual landownersmay be represented in the proceedings. The court explores the question thoroughly. Is the proposed annexation in the best interests of all concerned? Are the proposed terms fair? And are fair provisions made for the future improvement of the annexed territory? If annexation is ordered, the court remains in existence for five years and may be reconvened by any party to the original trial or by any 50 freeholders of the annexed area, to review and enforce the established terms and conditions.

In 1959, the Minnesota legislature swept away a whole tangled mass of legislation on the subject (there were 33 different means by which municipal boundaries might be adjusted) and established a fivemember Municipal Commission with three permanent members appointed by the governor and two temporary members for each hearing-the local district judge and the chairman of the board of County Commissioners. The Commission has the power to rule on annexation and consolidation proposals, and annexations under its authority have commenced. Its powers were widened by the legislature in 1961.

OTHER STATES—Indiana, Iowa, Okla-homa—have tried to give their cities a breathing spell by forbidding new incorporations in zones from three to five miles in width around the limits of larger cities. In Arizona, Idaho, Nebraska, and North Carolina, new incorporations within stated distances of any other existing incorporated municipality are restricted. Such provisions, of course, diminish to some extent the ability of suburban landowners to resist annexation by "defensive" incorporation.

In all this, some city planners and metropolitan-area experts see a trend toward compulsory annexation under the auspices Continued on page 34 of "impartial" arbiters, ju-dicial or quasi-judicial. With cries of joy they urge other legislatures to fall in line. Corresponding cries of alarm are already rising from the suburbs. Will even incorporated areas be safe in future? To the harricades, Homebodies!

Some suburbs may have reason for anxiety, but hardly for despair. In the first place, the weight of suburban representation in many state legislatures is going to be substantially increased by the effect of the recent Supreme Court decision supporting a more equitable apportionment of seats. Suburban population is growing on average much faster than either the population of the central cities or of rural areas: fair apportionment is bound to give suburban interests a better hearing.

The real problem is how fast-growing urban populations-in the central cities and in the suburbscan be supplied quickly enough with the municipal services and security which they must have. Piled on top of this is the problem of transportation, of which both the cities and the suburbs become more conscious daily.

To MEET these needs and solve these problems there will have to be expert, intelligent planning, reaching far into the future and covering entire metropolitan areas. But the beat of planning means little if authority to carry the plans into effect is lacking. What authority? And how controlled? Here is the rub. From the lengthy argument on this point is born the urge of impatient planners to invoke the authority of the state to force annexation down suburbia's reluctant throat by one means or another.

Yet the towns have not been wholly obstructive. Here and there whole networks of local communities have joined in cooperative regional planning. Special-purpose agenci for example the Port of New York Authority,

Massachusetts' Metropolitan District Commission—are nerforming yeoman tasks on a regional basis with the blessing of all concerned. In California, New York, Michigan, Texas, and several other statis. state-wide study groups permanent or semipermanent —are continuously at work examining various types of metropolitan-area organization, both for specific and general ends. From all this hard work and practical experience, patterns are taking form which may turn out in many cases to produce better results than could be hoped for from annexation. And. let's face it, there are also cases in which annexation may prove the best solution for particular situations, per-haps the only timely solution.

OPERATION, not coer-A cion, is the basis of successful annexation," as one city planner said. "But in the future, look for more joint effort by cities and suburbs to solve specific problems, such as transportation and water supply, and more open-mind-ed commissions, like the one set up in Minnesota, to rule on boundary changes."

As of today, the suburbs may be confident that in the east, in parts of the midlands, and in California, anything like compulsory annexation is a long way off-not as yet even a cloud on the horizon. In the rest of the country, the suburbs are younger, politically less experienced, but even so they need not tamely submit to being strangled in the cradle. The ideal of local self-government is still cherished - in American hearts, whether in Texas or Minne sota, North Carolina or Missouri. That ideal will always, soon or late, find champions to do battle in its behalf.

THEATER COATS that look sheer luxury but actually have secret, built-in practicality are taking frontrow seats this season. In glittering brocades and matelassé of Celanese fibers, they shine on evenings when heavy furs deserve a night off and cloth coats ought to be stay-at-homes. These coats can be worn to a country club dance, to a large party, or for a night on the town—with or without theater.

The coats are really coats, too: they are laminated with Scott Apparel foam so they will hold their shape and they are warm enough to take you straight through the round of late fall and winter entertaining. And you can choose a short, cocktail-length coat or a long one that sweeps to-or almost to-the floor. Some of the coats come with matching dresses, and all of them will make a dramatic entrance at any party. Shown here are three of the new designs modeled by Broadway stars Margaret Leighton of "Night of the Iguana," Sheree North of "I Can Get It for You Wholesale," and Sandy Dennis of "A Thousand Clowns."

Top left: Margaret Leighton wears a golden taupe dress and theater coat designed by Vera Maxwell in Bloomsburg's matelassé. The new long-length skirt sweeps from a plain bodice that can highlight a necklace or pin. $295

Bottom left: Beige brocade by Opulent is the fabric of this Mort Schrader design modeled by Sandy Dennis. The coat, also with a matching dress, has a face-framing stand-away collar. $125

The most precious gift of all

The first time yell baby is laid in your arms is a magic, mystic moment you'll treasure a whole life through. Suddenly you know this sweet and eleoping smile is truly yours. Suddenly you know something of the deep, bright meaning of life . . . in this greatest gift of all, your baby.

Feed for thought. If you and your doctor have decided to bottle-feed baby, you may want to ask him about Modifiac. . . . the Gerber Baby Formula. This special mill formula, which really looks and twees like mills, is adapted to bables. costs and tasses like mills, is acapted to bebled' nutritional and digestive needs; provides nour-shment comparable to mother's mills. No mix-ng needed. All you do is add the amount of water your doctor specifies.

Cryling economisms. Cryling is a perfectly natural part of a baby's life. It's the only way he can tell you he's hungry...lonely...has a bit of air-bubble trouble, etc. With patience and per-ception you'll soon learn what most brice mean.

Solid distary data. Several weeks after birth your baby's supply of iron diminishes. That's one of the reasons doctors usually recommend specially prepared beby cereals as the first solid food. Gerber Cereals are enriched with a special kind of iron that's easily shoothed by bables. They're also enriched with calcium and B-vitamins to provide further nutritional benefits.

Sandman statistics. Sleep patterns, like all baby behavior patterns, vary. Some babies simply need more sleep than others. But gener-ally speaking, these are the sleeping "norme":

Building of Church Meets Opposition

PRINCESS ANNE—A neighborhood delegation appeared at the Princess Anne County Board of Supervisors meeting this week and petitioned the board to reject the request of Newton Park Church of Christ to build a church in their neighborhood. The delegation of about 40 persons came from the Bellamy Manor section of the county.

The Church of Christ applied to the Princess Anne County Planning Commission for a use permit to build on a 3.8-acre site on Providence Drive and Luke Drive. The commission recommended the permit be accepted.

Planning director F. Mason Gamage said the commission re-jected the request because it felt "a church at this neighborhood does not represent good neigh-borhood planning."

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS the prosperity and well-being of this community are dependent upon cooperation between the two great elements of our society: farmers and urban people, and WHEREAS the complexities of their individual problems and the divergence of their activities have led to a widening gulf of misunderstanding, and WHEREAS this gulf of misunderstanding must be eliminated, and each group must understand the other if our American way of life is to endure, and WHEREAS Farm-City Week provides an unparalleled opportunity for farm and city people to become reacquainted, I, THEREFORE, Frank A. Dusch, Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach, Va., do hereby proclaim the period of November 16 through November 22 to be Farm-City Week; and I do further call upon all citizens of this community to participate to the limit of their capability in joint visits, seminars, pageants, fairs, civic, and social events attendant to a successful Farm-City Week in Virginia Beach.

Much to See and Much to Learn About New City of Virginia Beach

Many of the some 50-odd persons who will travel the new City of Virginia Beach aturday on a specially arranged tour ponsored by the Virginia Beach Development Council have a treat in store. They will, in many cases, see and hear things bout the new city area for the first time, hey will be surprised and they will be surprised and they will be mpressed.

Being surprised and impressed is only atural when one considers the vast land rea of the new city and the many phases in the in the new city. There is history, here is progress in the making and there is countless areas of recreation to be found in the geographical limits of the new city. The Virginia Beach Development Council tour has been well planned. For instance, he group, will visit Nimmo Church, then to the Lotus Gardens near Sandbridge. At Sandbridge there will be a beach buggy tour and the party will then visit Pungo and Charity Church, the largest in the

The tour party will visit Back Bay and the great hunting grounds of the new city. The group will visit the historic Princess Anne Courthouse which will become City Hall next January 1. The tour will visit the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, Seashore State Park, Fort Story and the historic cross there, and will wind up viewing the Norwegian Lady statue at Virginia Beach.

Shop and Mail Early

Our postmaster, Mr. J. T. Crosswhite, Jr. has again issued an appeal to the community to "Shop and Mail Early." And there is an interesting new note this year to his appeal. He adds: "Buy Christmas Stamps."

We are glad once again to assist our dedicated postal people in this worthwhile appeal. As Postmaster Crosswhite points out, the efficient handling of the Christmas mails last year, together with an assist from newspapers in publicizing the Shop and Mail Early program, helped save $5 million on last year's holiday mail deliveries.

Postal officials in Washington, Mr. Crosswhite adds, are again hopeful of providing an even more effective Christmas Mail operation this year and realizing more dramatic savings over costs of the holiday deliveries in recent years.

In addition, the Shop and Mail Early ap-ies in recent years. In addition, the Shop and Mail Early appeal has other dimensions of common peat has other dimensions of common sense. For example, it will assist Postmaster. Crosswhite in permitting the maximum number of our postal workers out of his total staff of 120 to have Christmas off with their families. And the appeal to the community to shop early will be beneficial to our economy, which, in turn, will help all of ur.

The new feature of this year's holiday appeal—the beautiful new Christmas stamp—is now on sale at the local post office. This 4-cent stamp, particularly appropriate for mailing Christmas cards, is the first postage stamp of its kind ever issued by the Post Office Department.

Won't you buy plenty to save waiting in line at stamp windows—and buy them and use them NOW?

World Business

"American business is world business—and it would be just as true the other way around." Thus reports the Exchange magazine, a publication of the New York Stock Exchange. It observes: "The channels of American trade and Industry have never stretched so far nor flowed so fully—between our neighbors to the north and south, to such faraway places as New Zealand, Liberia, Hong Kong, Kenya. And the traffit is not one-way."

Moreover, the Exchange points out, this trade is not confined to manufacturing goods in this country and marketing abroad. Beyond that, we ship raw materials, complete plants, crews of technicians—along with ideas and money. And a flood of wares, including essential raw materials which we do not produce at home, come to us from abroad. We get new ideas from abroad; too, along with new processes and new products.

It should be added that, in the world of the present, this trade serves more than an economic purpose. It enters into the realm of world politics and high policy, it is a major weapon in the cold war, in which the Slave World and the Free World are striving for economic as well as military superiority, along with influence and prestige.

Aggressive efforts are now being made, in both government and private quarters, for further stimulate American foreign trade. And an essential corollary, let it not be forgotten, is that we encourage and stimulate the transportation agency on which we can depend in any emergency — the U.S.—flag merchant marine, and not get caught where we are at the mercy of foreign ship lines. Eventualities in the Cuban crisis cannot be predicted but this situation vividly demonstrates United States dependence upon seapower—commercial as well as naval.

Better Sense

A farmer's best hope for good prices to see production in line with demand, to retain high production and then atpet to pies up the outlet to market," says Portland Gregonian. "In the long run, law of supply and demand cannot be ated. The federal government's farm gram has proved that."

What To Do If You Are Outdoors In Fallout

Cleanliness would be your defense if you were caught in a rain of fallout.

Removing your outer g a rments, getting inside shelter, and washing your hair and skin would stop the exposure a rotalistion.

You would not be radioactive from the past exposure, any more than a chest X-ray makes you radioactive.

If could be very tragic if people did not understand this fact, and denied entrance to the shelter to a member of the family or a friend because he had been exposed.

He should take off his contaminated outer clothing while still outside the shelter, then run inside, tossing the clothes aside.

His shoes could be sticky with fallout, and should be discarded, too. Or he could walk into the shelter, stepping onto a newspaper, take off the shoes and them and should be discarded, too. Or he could walk into the shelter, stepping onto a newspaper, take off the shoes and the newspaper outside. Fallout brought in by a child's muddy shoes.

You would be wise to provide some door mat outside the shelter in and out of the shelter for food or other supplies. Otherwise you might track fallout into even the

KIND OF FOOD

You Can Protect Yourself

Any mass of material between you and the fallout will cut down the amount of radiation that reaches you. Sufficient meas will make you safe.

Concrete or bricks, earth or sand, are some of the materials heavy enough to afford protection by absorbing radiation.

There is about the s n me amount of shielding in 8 inches of concrete as in 12 inches of earth or 16 inches of books or 30 inches of wood.

In most of the country, everywhere except in areas hit by the heaviest fallout, these thicknesses would give ample protection for a b a s e m e at shelter.

In your shelter you need water, and a means of judging whether your tap water has become contaminated by fallout.

You should plan a minimum of five gallons of bottled water perporson using the shelter, and go easy at the outset until you know whether you have enough or should ration it for a long stay. You may need water to mix with prepared or powdered food, milk, or coffee. Water used that way, will of course combat thirst. If you have room, store extra water in case some bottles or jugs are broken. Water tightly sealed in bottles will stay fresh, with no, bacterial contamination, for a long time.

You may need extra water to wash hands, face or hair exposed to fallout.

Some bottled water could be left just outside the entrance to a small shelter, but within easy reach. Cover it with paper or plastic film to catch any fallout. Simply toss away the covering before bringing the jug inside.

X-rays from fallout would not harm the water inside.

The interior might have seeped in? the interior might have seeped in? Went of should dist a sour dust with the car source. And it's a good idea to keep a short shovel or spade in the car struk. Following a nuclear attack the air would be contaminated by radioactive fallout only to the extent that it contained fallout

Fallout particles in harmful amounts would not 'be present in basement family shelters. People in underground family shelters could keep fallout particles out of their shelters by having a simple hood over the air-intake pipe.

A 3 to 5-minute Steady Tone, meaning, turn on your radio for directions from local authorities.

The most dangerous fallout—early fallout—would consist of radioactive particles that are relatively large and heavy—about the size of table salt or fine sand.

The chances are you could see the particles although you could not detect the radation from the particles without the use of a special instrument.

Following a nuclear attack, most radioactive elements in fall-out would decay rapidly, losing most of their power to harm. However for some time thereafter the hazard could continue to restrict normal activities in some parts of the country.

A few elements, such as strontium 90, cesium 137, and carbon 14, are long-lived and could harm humans in some ways, such as by being absorbed by food plants. However, the long-lived managing effects of such exposure are not yet known in great detail.

Special filters are not needed for small shelters. However, group shelters that have high-velocity air-intake fans would have to have filters on the air-intake system to keep fallout particles out.

In the nuclear age, nobody can guarantee you so many minutes, hours, or days of warning time.

Then turn your attention to fallout protection. There are six general guidelines to keep in mind for improvising last-minute fallout protection:

1. A basement is usually better than aboveground file or sparticularly in private residencs. (In large commercial or civic buildings, however, the central areas of middle floors could offer god protection.)

2. A corner of a basement that is below ground level is better than the center of the basement.

3. On aboveground floors, improvise shelter away from outside walls.

4. When improvising shelter, keep it small. Concentrate the shielding mass immediately around and above you to conserve construction time.

5. Stay away from windows and outside doorways. They are weak points in your fallout shield. Also, windows could be shattered many miles beyond the severe blast damage area of a nuclear explosion.

You'll want a zesty stuffing for your turkey and Nippy Sour Cream Stuffing fits the bill. Prepared bread stuffing is given your personal touch with tangy dairy sour cream and robust Parmesan cheese.

To take broccoli out of the ordinary vegetable class, butter blaze the spears with a sauce of remarkably good flavor; beef extract sparks this pluquant buttery glaze that's poured over the spears when partially cooked.

A slightly tart salad, Cottage Cheese Filled Tomato Rings, appears next on our menu. Finelly chopped garden vegetables mixed with creamy cottage cheese fill the centers of these tomato aspic molds.

We find dairy eggnog such a versatile dairy food to use. It's particularly wonderful in dishes calling for a blend of whole sweet milk and eggs. Velvety smooth and creamy, seasoned with just a modicum of spices, you'll find it the perfect ingredient for this delicate chiffon pie that's based on a crust of buttery vanilla wafers.

The origin of the Day determines it to be an observance of national significance. It is said to have originated with the proclamations of the governors of early states and was finally adopted by the Nation as a whole, with the President issuing a proclamation in the autumn of every year.

JUST A THOUGHT:
The happiest of people are those who spend as much time being thankful for what they have as wishing for additional

To some the Day may be a time of balancing books with God, a time of settling a credit and debat account with the heavenly Father. It is related that in pioneer days certain colonists met to pray for rain. But one old colonist arose, to voice his dissent. He said the forests abounded with game and the rivers and lakes with fish. And above all they had what they had come to America for—civil and religious liberty. On the whole he moved to amend by observing a day of thanksgiving unto God. Ever since that time our people have found enough of good in their cup-to warrant giving thanks to the Father.

But better than the balancing of

But better than the balancing of the account with God is to be thankful unto God for himself and that we are in his care and keep-ing.

It's strange how a man's mind works ...

My wife had said, "The keys are on the table," and we both were thinking of the car keys. I have that abominable habit of laying them down wherever I put my gloves — and I'm always losing my gloves.

But when I saw the keys, I saw the Bible, too. We always keep it seven though we seldom read it.

"The keys are on the table." I am just enough of a philosopher to see the chance implication of those words. The keys to a great many things must lie within the covers of that Book. Perhaps the keys to all of the really important things for you, and for me, and for everyone else.

We've been searching far and wide for the keys to peace, and seturity, and fairness, and brotherhood.

I wonder if the keys are on the table!

When their versatile leader, Paul Baron, lifts his baton, it is the signal for the Rascals to swing into a variety of rollicking routines which include hilarious comedy capers and dazzling acrobatics in addition to their superb Harmonica showmanship. In all, the Rascals huge array of Harmonicas is valued at some two thousand dollars.

GUNS OF DARKNESS
Political intrigue and revolution in an imaginary South American republic are the background for this English adventure drama. David Niven, an executive on a big British plantation, is at odds with himself, with his wife and with life in general. On New Year's Eve, revolutionaries take over the government of the country and shoot the president, who estapes, though seriously wounded. Niven finds him, and is suddenly determined to get the hunded man across the border. He undertakes the eighty mile trip to safety, fully aware of what capture will mean not only to his passenger, but to himself and to his wife, who accompanies him on the terrifying journey. The dangers of mountain, jungle, quicksand and pursuing revolutionaries afford te are sometimes tends to become confused times cloudy, but an excellent cast gives finished performances.

Satisfied with the profits you are making on feeder calves this year?

Now—at market season for calves — is a good time to tally up your beef production sheet. Whether or not you are making a net profit or a net loss depends on many factors. Octating overhead is a major factor, and is increasingly hard to cut down. With high operating costs it is important to produce more pounds of high quality feeder calf from each cow in the herd. Management plays a big part, but many producers overlook the fact that the herd bull alone can make a tremendous difference in the weaning weights within a single herd have varied as much as 100 pounds between calves of the same age. Bulbs do well in good garden soil, if there is good drainage. If the soil is poor, take steps to improve it. Commercial fertilizer mixtures such as 5-10-5 worked into the soil before planting—about 4 pounds per 100 aguare feet—will be beneficial.

Adding organic matter to poor soil is also important. Cover crops turned under or material from the compost pile will supply organic matter. Don't use animal manures, at the time of planting, because they tend to increase the rotting of some bulbs. After plants are above ground, during the growing season, apply one or two applications (about ½ pound per 100 square feet) of nitrogen fertilizer.

The Hospital Fund Campaign Moves Into High Gear to Raise Dollars

The new drive for funds for the proposed 100-bed hospital at Hilltop has moved into high gear with announcement this week that Circuit Court Judge Robert S. Wahab, Jr., has been named general chairman of the campaign to raise $500,000 toward the cost of the new facility.

In accepting the responsibility Judge Wahab stressed the "unprecedented challenge to every citizen of our area" in the job ahead. Judge Wahab stated that it "is an extraordinary privilege to be called upon to serve as chairman."

The Sun-News is especially pleased that Judge Wahab has assumed the reigns in this important undertaking. We feel that he will give the fund drive the capable leadership required and we have no doubt that the campaign will be a success.

The new hospital, when completed, will fill a long felt need in this community and will give the new City of Virginia Beach a hospital facility to serve its fast growing population and its resulting medical needs.

Enthusiasm and interest in the new hosenthusiasm and interest in the new nos-pital in the new location was spontaneous when it was announced several weeks ago that the General Hospital group and the Princess Anne County Memorial Hospital committee had reached an understanding on a single new and larger hospital than had previously been proposed.

January 31, 1963 has been set as the completion date for the new hospital drive and with the cooperation of all citizens this should be the date that General Chairman Wahab will be able to announce that the $500,000 goal has been surpassed.

Raising a half million dollars is a chal-lenge, but we are confident that the people of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County will answer this challenge with funds to

'Intellectual Paralysis'

Consider, for a moment, these two state-

The first is from William H. Whyte, Jr., writing in the symposium "Man and Civilization": "The researcher must not be afraid to be wrong. If he quails too much at the prospect, if he keeps stalling until all the "is" can be perfectly dotted and the "is" crossed, the result will be a sort of intellectual paralysis."

tual paralysis."

The second is from Dr. Lowell T. Cogge The second is from Dr. Lowell T. Coggeshall, vice president of the University of Chicago. "It is far better to tolerate the occasional excesses in drug promotion than to attempt control by legislation that is necessarily unselective and inherently cuts off-both good and bad. The medical profession itself is the best control because it will not waste time listening to pointless propaganda, nor will it prescribe drugs of no value."

These are not remote, academic matters.
The words of both men apply with full force to the current and continuing controversy over government regulation of prescription drugs. This controversy was brought to high heat by the discovery that a European-produced drug was capable of producing tragic malformations in children if taken at a certain time during the mother's pregnancy. But it speaks volumes for our safeguards that the drug was never sold in this country, but was used only on a limited test basis.

Human progress, in almost any field, involves risks. Any unknown which men are striving to explore is inevitably a place of hazards. In the search for new and better drugs, there must be laws, such as we have, which will guarantee the highest degree of safety that is compatible with unafraid and even daring research. But humanity will be ill-served indeed if the law so binds the researcher that, in Mr. Whyte's eloquent phrase, he is forced into an "intellectual paralysis."

What's Happened to Time?

What has the jet age of international air travel done to time?

Answer: As a practical matter, it has all but eliminated it as a travel problem.

A news release from Pan American World Airways provides a dramatic example. Passengers on one of its July flights were able to celebrate our Independence Day the far-flung parts of the world.

Here's the way the story went: The speeding Jet plane was in New Delhi,

SEA HAWK Tid-Bits By DARLA SUE DESKINS

Congratulations to the Virginia Beach High School Varsity football team. By downing Chuckatuck 26-0 they are cochampions of the district. They have fought hard and really deserve this successfulyear.

Last Friday was the absolute, the positively, the last day for the Hurricane to be on sale. There are going to be a great deal of disappointed people; word has it that only half of the student body purchased an annual.

Virginia Beach High School held its annual Fall Open House. This one was the best ever! The speeches went directly to the heart of the matter—and so did the teachers to the dismay of the students.

Virginia Beach High School really does shine. The reason is the new clean-up campaign being pushed by the Student Cooperative Association. Kitty Bosher, president, has kept the students on their toes with speeches and posters. The gum and pencil marks are rapidly disappearing and it looks like once again we will be able to say that we are proud of our school, even its appearance.

The Jr. Civitan Club after sell-The Jr. Civitan Club after selling much candy for much money had its annual banquet for the induction of new members. The place was the Black Angus, the Civitans never had it so good. The Club is certainly heading in the right direction under the leadership of its capable president, Mary Kay Newcomb.

Last Friday, 23 Juniors were tapped into the National Honor-Society. It was a thrilling ceremony for students and a solemn one for parents.

Thanksgiving Prayer

I thank You, God, for those who came to dwell
In our fair land where freedom filled the air;
For faith they gave their children through the years
That has become my heritage to shere.
I thank You, God, for cloudy days in life
That shower me with problems great and small,
For, when the clouds disperse and light comes through,
I am assured that You have heard my call.
I thank You, God, for all the little things
That add to life its beauty and its glow,
And for the warmth and happiness of home

That add to life its beauty and its glow,
And for the warmth and happiness of home
Where seeds of love are nourished as they grow.
I thank You, God, for guidance through the year
And for the meaning of Thanksgiving Day.
In gratitude, may I, in word and deed,
Show others how to live the thankful way.

Since then have come many little classics, like, "The King's Stilts," "Hortofi Hatches An Egg," and "The Five Hundred Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins."

In 1957, Dr. Seuss (he's really in Theodore S. Geisel) started a small revolution in children's books with "The Cat in The Hat." That book was geared to the beginning reader and provided a delightful 'rhymned story for the child with a very limited reading vocabulary.

Geisel is now president of Random House Beginner Books and that division has brought out a series of books with vocabularies limited to 75,100 or 150 words. It's amazing how interesting some of them are. "Go, Dog Go," by P. D. Eastman, "Ten Apples on Top," by Theo. LeSieg (spell it backward) and "Snow" by Roy McKie and P. D. Eastman, are three of the best of them.

Children's, foreign language books are another relatively new trend in children's books. Many are written in English as well as the second language. "Mabel the Whale," by Patricia King, principal of Shelton Park Elementary School, is one of the Follett Easy-To-Read Books and is also available in French.

"Our Friends in Spain" (oub.

Books and is also available in French.

"Our Friends in France" and "Our Friends in Spaim" (published by Sloane) are clear, well-illustrated attempts to teach simple phrases in a foreign language.

It would be impossible in a short article to even scratch the surface of this year's crop of children's books—so here are a list of a few books that appealed to this reporter. There are many, many others, and there are also many new editions of oid classics available for Christmas giving.

YOU READ TO ME, I'LL READ TO YOU. John Clard, Lippincott, $3.50, ages 7 and up. A delightful book of poems for parents and children to read to each other. One page (in blue ink) is for mother or dad to read, the next page (in black ink) is for the child to read to his parents.

With Christmas galloping up on the calendar, parties are fast oming the topic of the day,

This past month I had an opportunity to attend two parties that will long stand out in my mind. The weather may be a wee bit too cool for them now but you might bear them in mind for any warm-weather plans in the making.

The Bierstube the United States Brewry Association put for the Superior Courts convention at the Alan B. Shepard Covention Center was a real hit...

Everyone was given a colorful, feathered Tyrolean hat as they walked in the door and Lou Saks and his "falking violin" offered just the right amount of background music to set the German stena.

Beer, of course, was the main evening fare and with it went long pretzel sticks and cheese and crackers. The meal was cooked, by John Hoey, I might add, with beer and included shrimp, knockwurst and saurkraut, saurbraten and goodness knows what else. It was delightful. Red and white checked cloths and candles were used on the tables and the entire setting made a fun-for-all atmosphere.

. Now that the Bierstube has been introduced in the Virginia Beach area, it wouldn't surprise me one bit to find it cropping up in homes next summer.

The other part was given by Howard and Pat Hendron in Kempsville. Pat is the Princess Anne County Welcome Wagon hostess and is quite adept at party-making.

When the invitation came in for a "Bermuda Party" (dress informally), I should have realized this gal had something up her

After dinner, they announced to their guests that everyowas going on a treasure hunt. And hunt we did.

The entire crowd was divided up into teams of 4 or 5 and the captain was given the first clue. It took each car to a near-by service station and entitled all to enough gas to complete the tour. From there on it was every team for himself. The clues, eleverly written, not only had to be found but deciphered and it took the combined efforts of each team to keep up with the Hendron's

FLYING LOW

One clue took us to Norfolk Municipal Airport. We searched the grounds, the shrubbery and the outlying buildings for the jar that contained the hint to our next destination. A couple of Civil Areenautics Patrol members stopped one hunter from exploring one of the smaller buildings.

In answer to their questions he told them he was "looking for a bottle with a message in it."

"You might be looking for a bottle, fellow," they told him, "but I doubt if it'll have a message in it."

We finally located the clue when we noticed an airlines agen giving us a peculiar look. "You'll think we're crazy," we gingerly said, "but we're on a treasure hunt and we're looking for ou

"Which team are you?" was his reply. And he handed us the sealed envelope.

It was a beautifully planned party and cleverly executed any time you want to try an unusual idea, why not ask the W. come Wagon Hostess how it's done?

MALIBU — For 15 years Mrs. Ruth Bridges, as a visiting eacher, visited homes and talked to parents in an effort to help hildren solve problems they might be having. Today, as a principal, she hopes to prevent these problems before they arise.

Mrs. Bridges' "battleground" in this conflict with disturbed coungsters will be Malibu Elementary School, which has extended eyond its Nov. 1 opening date ut is nearing completion.

Until her school opens, the mall, vivacious Mrs. Bridges hares principal offices with frs. Mabel Church at Plaza Elementary School. The Plaza Elementary School. The Plaza chil-tary School. The Plaza chilattend school during the ming; the Malibu students in the afternoon. Though this arrangement could have produced many problems, the congeniality and cooperation of the two principals has made it a smooth-

Reading, or the inability to read, is the one factor that contributes most to emotional upsets in children, she feels, and she plans to use a comprehensive reading program throughout the school as the first size search less than the service of the servi throughout the school as the first step toward her goal.

"It is very important to make children feel that they are worthwhile people," she said. "but if a child is unable to read at his grade level he suffers from a feeling of inadequacy... that's when problems arise." Mrs. Bridges does not feel that accelorated grouping will eliminate the reading deficiency, but rather that each teacher should instruct her pupils, regardless of their mental abilities in other subjects, according to their grade level in reading to grade material," she said, "then his teacher should see that he reads at this level until he is ready for more advanced material.

"If a teacher can keep each child at his own level, then they don't need accelerated classes."

Social Worker

Her background as a social worker and visiting teacher, has perhaps given Mrs. Bridges an insight in the problems of children that most school administrators have not had the opportunity to have and has made her understand and know how to cope with these disturbances.

A native of Chatham, Va., a small town near Danville, she taught public school there before joining the welfare department in probation, child welfare and social work. She accepted the position as visiting teacher for Princess Anne County 10 years ago and maintained that post until she accepted the principaliship of Malibu this fall. As visiting teacher, Mrs. Bridges visited sick children in the homes and assigned a tutor to them, worked with mentally retarded children, and served as a laison between

He noted that—despite the Department's efforts over many years to promote good packaging and addressing—the Postal Service each year has been unable to deliver, or return, about half a million parcels, including many lost because of poor packaging or incorrect addressing.

"It always mystifies us," Mr. Day observed, "why a person will spend a lot of time and money to select and buy a gift, and then will take about 10 seconds to package it and even less time to address it."

Another situation that discourages veteran postal employees is that when they finally manage to decipher an address on a parcel—they find it is completely erroneous—addressed to the wrong street or sometimes even to the wrong city and wrong state.

even to the wrong city and wrong state.

Once a local post office has exhausted all efforts to make delivery or return a parcel, and has held it unclaimed for the standard 90 days, the parcel is usually lost for sender or intended recipient.

Such parcels are disposed of by the Postal Service at auctions held at 15 major post offices over the nation.

"Sensible mailing practices, including early shopping and mail deposit, make Christrass on much better I can't see why everybody doesn't do it," the local postmaster commented.

Warm Reaction Given Little Theatre Comedy

VIRGINIA BEACH — The Virginia Beach Little Theatre opened its current season last week with the presentation of "Bell, Book and Candle."

The comedy, about witches and "strange doings" in a modern setting, was well received by one of the largest audiences the Little Theatre has enjoyed in quite a while.

Roxanne Dark, a newcomer to local theatre patrons, played the role of Gillian Holroyd, a chic young woman with witches' powers and handled the lengthy part effectively.

Tred Himes, a familiar face in Little Theatre and Sandpiper roles, took the part of Miss Dark's bewitched young suitor and Foy Shaw, another theatre favorite, played her equally witch-empowered brother. Both men turned in their usual fine performances.

In some parts of the country and for some kinds of shopping, These are the basis for their discount stores play a big part in the retail market. For instance, most medium or large size cities now have at least one discount store. More likely, they are well ringed with them. For some kinds of merchandise, they also play a big part in the market. Large amounts of clothing, furniture, home furnishings, hardware, and electrical appliances, for example, move through discount stores. Too, the part discount stores play is bigger than total sales. Other retail stores have to count prices, quality, and services offered by discount stores when they decide what and how they are going to sell.

they decide what and how they are going to sell.

To date, discount stores play only a small part in food retailing. Country-wide we buy only two to three percent of our food in them. Yet, even here the part played is bigger than the sales. During the past two years, every time you got two grocers together for any length of time, they started talking about discount stores—would they expand into food, and what effect would they have if they did go into foods? So, here too, discount stores play a part in the pricing, quality and services offered by the other retail stores.

Right now it seems that discrete the stores will store the stores of the stores o

Record Dividend Will Be Paid

NORFOLK.—Policyholders of the Connecticut Mutual Life In-surance Company will receive a record $40 million of policy dividends next, year it was an-nounced recently by D. Conrad Little, General Agent for Nor-folk.

About $1 million of the total reflects an increase in the divi-dend scale on policies Issued prior to April 18, 1962, when dend scale on policies issued prior to April 18, 1982, when the company's revised policy series went into effect, Mr. Little said. The liberal scale adopted in 1982 for the new edition of contracts is being continued for 1963; the increased 1963 scale for older policies brings dividends for both old and new oplicies into line with current improved earnings.

The new scale for the older editions of policies represents the 12th dividend increase in 20 years for Connecticut Mutual policyowners.

Also announced were two interest rate increases. The rate allowed on dividend accumulations and funds left with the company under optional settlement contracts will be 4 per cent in 1963. The 1962 rate is 3.8 per cent.

You often must choose among discount stores just as you would among department stores, grocery stores and dress shops. Right now, it appears that discounting, at least in some things, is for a lot of us. We buy in them; we go back to them. The number of discount stores is growing rapidly. They will be with us for quite a while.

An Analytical Look At

Retailing & Distribution

By GEORGE L. COFFER Va. Beach Distributive Education Co

Steam Bath & Massage

He did not offer to be of service; he simply stood by, grim and indifferent.

Is Your staff really Service—Minded?" I talked about things that the employer can do so that he may be of greater service to the community. The entire article was devoted to being service-minded as a business manager. This 'week's column will be devoted to what the employees can do to promote better service.

One of the best alfies of any small firm can be an attitude that may be called "service-mindedness." That means rendering service to your customers going beyond the mere act of selling.

It is not enough, however, that you, the boss, be service-minded. You have to instill that same spirit of true service in your employees. After all, in many case—since you can't always wait on customers yourself, or even be on the floor all of the time—the employee represents the store in the eyes of the customers. His attitude will be interpreted as the store's attitude.

As the boss of a small store there are certain "things to do" that you can call to the attention of your sales people: Among them are: Speak clearly, talk—but not too much; know your merchandise; look and listen; be neat, be clean; be helpful. All of this is part of the idea of service-mindedness.

The customer was angry. He had every right to be. He had gone into the small haberdash-ery near where he lived ("I like trading in my own area," he was fond of saying), had asked to see ia shirt in his size. The salesman, sour-faced and word-chary, had tossed a couple of shirts on the Counter, had looked on in bored fashion while the customer at ried to make up his mind.

BASKIN' IN THE SUN

I love statistics. No, I don't. Fil change that sentence. I love statisticians. They collect all the bizarre numbers of life. I presume it is a compulsion and that they are unable to kick the habit. They have numbers on their backs. The statistician raised to the highest degree of ecstay is of course, the one who has been called to that Utopia of Statistics — the compilation of baseball statistics. You know the kind I mean. John Fumblefingers has handled the largest number of bunts by left-handed pinch-hitters in Yankee Stadium on Mondays; largest number for a right-handed third baseman, that is!!

I didn't mean to get off on baseball.
I really was elasted to read in the paper that some lever of numbers has recently completed a study and has discovered that the average executive spends approximately 700 hours a year sitting in meetings. Further, the average company spends between $35,000 and $50,000 a year in selected for this time that these men spend in the meetings. All I gotta say is that they are underpaid no matter what their salaries are.

We have gone committee crazy in this country of ours. The best comment on committee work was the remark that a giraffe is the result of a committee convened to construct a horse.

SOME MEETING!

Remember the joke about the drunk who wandered into a crowded elevator? He had his back to the doors, and stood there facing all those silent people who were wearing the closed, blank expression of elevator passengers the world over. He watched them for a few moments and then said, "Well, I guess you're wondering why I called this meeting!" I wasn't on this particular elevator, but I'll give you eight to five that there wasn't a single smile. Humor is not at all appreciated at meetings—no matter how trivial the agenda.

I suspect that there is a direct relationship between the agenda and the length of meetings. The sillier the agenda, the longer the meeting, I think I'll try to collect some figures on this, since I have been to some very dull meetings in my life—most of which l wais while listening to two committee-towers quintercost.

Most organizations pride themselves on their "democratic approach." This is committee-talk for holding unnecessary meetings that are long and pointless. I suppose that if the amount of energy expended by committee members in trying to stay awake were converted into missile fuel, we could put the largest committee ever formed on the moon, and have enough energy left over to make enough gavels to brain all the chairmen who allow meetings to drag on forever.

I hope you've noticed something else. The lower the rank of the committee member, the longer he talks. The chairman usually gets it said in a hurry, but spare me from his assistant to his assistant. I guess these poor souls have very few moments of glory.

moments of glory.

Well—I hope many of you agree with me on this meeting bit in our over-organized society. If so, please arrange to meet

The spirit of Thanksgiving takes root in the art of a child in the same gradual fashion most us have experienced.

First there is excitement and anticipation which indance awakens in our minds. Then comes the pensive moment when we real-that all this abundance is Someone's gift to us. Next we know the prayer of gratitude that flows m willing lips and a thankful heart.

Finally — and supremely — there is the sense of confidence, of trust, in a God whose Love is everywhere so manifest.

The hope of your neighborhood churches is that your family's observance of this traditional feast may encourage the spiritual growth of your children . . . and renew your own precious faith.

Facts About Apples

Flavor depends upon the variety and condition of the fruit. Flavor is best when the apple is tripe. An apple that ripens on the tree usually has a better flavor than an apple that ripens on the milk to the first mixture. Spread the usually has a better flavor than an apple that ripens after by the flavor. An immature apple is likely to have an inferior flavor when you cook it. Good flavor in the cooked product.

Color is best preserved in cooking apples by making cooking in a raw apple doesn't necessarily mean you'll get good flavor in the cooked product.

Color is best preserved in cooking apples by making cooking time as short as possible. This is true regardless of the method of cooking you use. You can conserve color better if you exclude oxygen during the cooking process. You can do this by cooking in a tightly covered kettle. The red pigments of the apple are just under the skin. Society speaks through the price system and determines which goods and services it wants—as well as those it can do without. Economic growth occurs as the productivity of a business increases.

Virginia farmers, by adopting modern technology such as the use of mechanical power instead of animal power, have increased their productivity tremendously in the past 10-15 years.

The business of farming in Virginia's rural areas contributes greatly to economic growth through the purchase of production items as well as products of consumer goods. Rural areas also add to economic growth in the shifting of labor by migration to other segments of the economy. The transfer of workers from run areas is a sizeable capital control on the trans of the rearrange education and training education and training

HARDWARE DISEASE
CAUSES HEAVY LOSSES
A diet of nails and wire may seem odd. But lots of animals seem attracted to it—to the dismay of their owners.

"Hardware disease," more scientifically dubbed "traumatic gastritis," causes losses of more than a million dollars a year to livestock producers.

The problem is most common among cattle, especially dairy cattle. Sheep, and goats, being ruminants, are also subject to this problem. Cattle, sheep, and goats do little chewing of feed while eating. The food is swallowed or gulped to be chewed later as cud. Small foreign objects may pass un-noticed into the stomach.

Because of their weight, metal objects settle to the bottom of the animal's stomach. Then the sharp bits of metal — nails, pieces of wire, wire staples — may work their way through the stomach wall. This may cause only a temporary digestive upset if the metal becomes imbedded in the stomach wall and begin treatment as soon as possible.

Bits of metal can be removed surgically, but many veterinarians are using powerful magnetic devices which may be effective in the early stages. In some cases the magnet is run down the animal's throat, into the reticulum where it may pick up the metal objects. This is at tructures not successful, and more often the magnet is left in the stomach, where it attracts and metal becomes imbedded in sear tissue, the symptoms often disappear. But if the animal is subjected to great strain, such as ealving, the metal may be forced deeper and the symptoms will start again.

What measures can a farmer take to prevent hardware disease? A small, powerful magnet introduced through the mouth and swallowed will remain in the stomach where it will attract metal and prevent, it from penetrating the stomach wall.

DITORIALLY SPEAKING

Proposed Water Rate Increase Is Surprise Development

Virginia Beach City Manager W. Russell Hatchett minced no words in his reaction to a newspaper account of Norfolk City's proposal to raise the price of water purchased by the present City of Virginia Reach Beach.

In a letter to Norfolk City Manager Maxwell, Hatchett stated, first of all, that he learned of the development "second hand from the press." He referred to the newspaper story in a Norfolk paper Wednesday morning that reached him before the actual Maxwell letter.

To say that this latest move on the part of Norfolk City is a "surprise" development is putting it mildly, we believe. It has been common knowledge that meetings, correspondence and conversations have been progressing toward what is hoped a meeting of the minds on new water contracts for the new cities of Virginia Beach and Chesapeake with the City of Norfolk.

Mr. Hatchett has called attention to the fact that Virginia Beach rates were increased by 20 per cent two years ago and that a renewal at the present rates would be sound and practical.

be sound and practical.

Whatever the outcome may be it does seem untimely for such a proposal to be made. It seems to us that it is not in the best interest of the entire area and that the proposal is made at a time when many felt real progress was being made in a permanent solution to the water problem.

We trust that Norfolk officials will re-

We trust that Nortolk orticials will review the water contract question once again and that they will not accept the rate increase proposal. We say again that this is not the time to raise such questions,

The New Look of TVDC

The Tidewater Virginia Development Council has taken on a new look from an organizational standpoint since the industry-hunting agency voted a change in its by-laws recently.

We believe the change is a good one and that better control will be the result and it would appear that the agency may operate on a more efficient budget which would result in lower expenses.

Apparently future planning for TVDC calls for more direct industry-hunting and less emphasis on research work. Although research will not be neglected it appears that TVDC will reduce its expenses in this field since it will rely more on assistance from Old Dominion College and the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg.

TVDC has been in existance some six ears and we think it has done a good job. It has certainly placed the area's image in the minds of industrialists throughout the nation and it has done a sound job of ad-vertising the advantages of the area.

As we understand it TVDC will place As we understand it IVDC will place more concentration on its advertising program in the future and we believe this to be a sound step. We believe the change in by-laws and the organizational changes announced so far will place TVDC in a much better position to do the job intended for it—to promote the area industrially and to further its gains in the field of tourism.

We believe that TVDC has been successful in its mission during its formative years and we predict even more success for this organization in the future.

IN VIRGINIA, on March 8, in a furious naval battle at Hampton Roads, the Confederate ironciad Virginia sank the Union steam frigate Cumberland, disabled the Mianesota, and captured the frigate Congress. Virginians cheered their victory with foaming steins of beer.

For even then, beer was Virginia's traditional bever-age of moderation. Beer still provides enjoyment for Virginians, and a good living for the employees and suppliers of the Brewing industry.

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and pro-priety wherever beer and ale are served.

Retailing & Distribution

An Analytical Look At

By GEORGE L. COFFER Va. Beach Distributive Education Coordinator

Advertising can be a sales aid and a prestige builder. Ideally, it should be both. Good ads can help create immediate profits and long-term consumer good will. But an advertising campaign should be the result of careful planning; hapazard ads will cost you money without adding to your profits or prestige.

More specific information can be obtained from the SBA Small Marketers Aid, number 56 on this subject.

The Distributive Education course called "Human Relations for Employees" was completed last week here at the Beach. More courses will be scheduled in the months to come. There will be courses such as Salesmanship and Merchandise Information which will be conducted by specialists in their fields.

The Independent Garage

adding to your profits or prestige.

It makes good sense to pay as much attention to what you are getting from your advertising dollar as to what you're getting from, your advertising dollar as to what you're getting from, your public; by using the one medium or the combination of media best suited to your firm's purpose; and, finally, by selecting one product or sales claim and presenting it with force, clarity, and originality.

Many businessmen, unfortunately for themselves, feel that advertising is designed solely to promote the sale of merchandise. This, however, is only one form of advertising, if the other major kind of advertising is frequently referred to as "image būilding" or "goodwill advertising."
